UNB Delegates travel to Vancouver

by Jeffrey Czopor

On January 3, 1992, 10 UNB AIESECers hopped into a van and headed for Bangor, Maine which would certainly not be their final destination. Heading ultimately for the warmer climates of beautiful British Columbia 3,000 miles across the continent, this harmonious mixture of people were on their way to attend

AIESEC Canada's 1992 National Congress.

In an organization promoting internationalism and proper commercial/business ties amongst peoples, it only seems necessary that the various AIESEC local committees from across Canada meet at least once a year to discuss the status of the organization, set goals and train new members holding recently elected executive positions.

From AIESEC Queen's and McGill to AIESEC Calgary they arrived in droves prepared to better familiarize themselves with all aspects of the organization, learn new way to improve the status of AIESEC at their very own universities, and become more attuned with the world at large.

The extremely pleasant surroundings of the Delta Pacific Hotel just outside of Vancouver sporting a scenic view of the snow-capped mountains of "Super, Natural British Columbia" by no means hindered the success of this national meeting.

Presented with a number of informative seminars and adept speakers, old and new members became more aware of the need to actively promote the ideals of AIESEC in their own local committees and further breakdown the social and economic barriers that still persists amongst many countries.

On anything from business etiquette, and training sessions for newly elected executive members to living life more fully, the conference sought not only to make everyone better AIESECers, but better people.

Attending the conference were Andrea Hunter, President of AIESEC UNB; Julie Ferguson, in-coming President; Scott Beaman and Janice McPherson, Marketing; Nick Rodrigue and Jeff Czopor, Exchange; Mark Landry, Marketing Representative; Kris Reynolds, Mike Appt and Andrew Keenan, all instrumental in the National Conference planning that UNB will be sponsoring in January 1993. Dan Symes, former AIESEC executive, also attended the conference, although he lost his campaign for a national position after a close election.

In attendance at the conference were Jeff Czopor, Mike Appt, Julie Ferguson, Andrew Keenan, Nick Rodrigue, and Janice McPherson
