January 31 . 1997

eview

s going on; and the have time to make review indicates that Id be made." she Gazette, in this issue. e survey questions by nt body can commen nance of this year's

.ca/~gazette/

Brock get the fee. Any fee

o be submitted to the the end of January so uded in the upcoming trol is now soliciting n the university The patrol hopes to urge enough to fund a projected at over is able to receive the is looking to get, he and the program. Part reate 37 paid positions. ncludes a bike patrol rt students as far as plan receives funding stration the patrol will es and could fall under ampus Police.

v.brocku.ca/press

1

Tel

launches Economics 1000 on the web. "We've awakened a sleeping giant," said Economics Chairperson Beverly Cook of her department's foray into the world wide web. "Part of the focus is that the change in the economy is continuous and we're always adjusting. At the moment we're adjusting to this change and the change in the labour force, developing skills for the moment."

Economics of Information Technology will be offered in the fall and will focus on the implications of

THE BRUNSHICKAN to be paying rent."

The Paper Trail, owned and operated by the UNB Student Union, will continue to occupy its current location rent-free, Norris. if a recommendation from the Student Union Building Advisory Board is accepted by UNB officials.

he said.

NEWS

The decision comes as the SUB Advisory Board considers what to do about renewing leases for most tenants in the building, with the scepter of SUB Expansion looming in the background. Most leases expire in the SUB during 1997

January 31 • 1997

GORDON LOANE

One of the first leases up for renewal was the Paper Trail, which has only been in operation near the front lobby of the SUB since September offering bus passes, photocopies and other items. Recently a video rental service has been added. Last year, the UNB Student Union operated a Help Centre in that location. but the style and title of the business changed with the opening of the Paper Trail

It begged a question whether the Paper Trail was a business and should pay commercial rent or whether the operation was a student service that should be accommodated rent-free. "I brought that question up at a recent SUB Advisory Board meeting," said Kim Norris, Director of the Student Union Building

"But the Board felt the Paper Trail operation is a non-profit service for students and further felt it was not

If the economy changes every day, how does the study of Economics keep up? It gets a little innovative, if the UNB

Department of Economics is any

Beginning in September, the department will be offering three new courses, including one on the Economics of Information Technology.

And the department will be stepping on-line itself this spring when it

THE BRUNSWICKAN

MARY ROGAL-BLACK

Paper Trail, SRC will remain rent-free SU Council reacts to hikes necessary for that operation at this time The same sort of question arose about

THE BRUNS ONLINE: http://www.unb.ca/web/bruns

Norris. the location of the UNB SU operated But in what can only be described as Student Resource Centre, according to an ironic twist, a second set of student offices occupied by UNB's Orientation The Student Resource Centre has Committee and Graduating Class among been located for the past two years in others will continue to pay commercia former commercial space, at one time rent.

occupied by Bellboy Dry Cleaning. "Those offices will remain commerci

The Social Club has been a tenant in the SUB since 1970, this successful operation is looking for an extension on its lease and met with the SUB Advisory Board Wednesday. BAS VONE. PHOTO

Economics department changing with the times courses.

their resolution.

introductory level."

"I indicated that I would like to space and that will not change," said consider putting a commercially viable Norris. operation in that location," said Norris. "If the UNB SU wish to keep that

'The Board received a long list from room they will have to pay commercial rent according to the current policy." e manager of the Student Resource Center of what services are provided," Comm ting on the entire situ Norris said as Director of the SUB he In the end, the SUB Advisory Board would like to have two more commercial

"These courses are designed to give students an appreciation of issues as they affect their daily lives without involving a lot of numbers," said Cook. "We're trying to have students think about issues and the economic approach to Cook said the new concentration is aimed at students who intend to go into public policy, government or investment careers, but don't want to study numbers

"I guess you could say it's in response to shrinking demand for the ordinary economics stream," said Cook. "We looked at other programs and found that a lot of schools offer introductory courses that are less quantitative at the

Econ 1045, Economics in Everyday Life, will be taught by Anthony Myatt and Econ 1055, Economics and Public Policy, will be taught by Stephen Law.

decided to award the space to the Student "But on the other side of the coin the Resource Centre rent-free, according to Student Union is providing a service to

Celebrating 130 Years in Print

students and the SUB Advisory Board agrees," he said.

Meanwhile, it looks like at least four other long term tenants in the SUB can expect smooth sailing when it comes to their lease renewals.

The owners of SUB Hairstyling, SubTowne, the Campus Shoppe and Flannery Jewellers are all seeking renewals and Norris said the SUB Advisory Board has received no Two major tenants in the SUB- The Cellar, owned by the UNB SU and the College Hill Social Club (CHSC) want renewals as well.

"Negotiations are on-going with both operations on a number of matters," said Norris, who could not provide further details at this time. The SUB Advisory Board met with representatives from the Cellar last week and with the Board of Directors of the Social Club this week. With all of the tenants it is not a question of whether their leases will be renewed but a question of for how long, according to Norris.

"The question of how long leases will be renewed depends a great deal on the question of SUB Expansion," he said. "That is why the SUB Advisory Board has asked that the university and its officials make the decision on the length of the leases because of the uncertainty regarding SUB Expansion," Norris said

emand from New Brunswick High

"We've had requests for this kind of thing so that high school students who've completed their course requirements can do this kind of thing and come into university with a credit

Cook acknowledges that on-line courses are somewhat of an unknown for the department and said that they until they know how much demand there is for the on-line course.

However, she pointed out, the professor for the on-line course should be well prepared-he actually wrote the book. "[Professor Sephton] wrote the textbook and he has revamped his textbook to a web format and he's done

Last fall Economics introduced a minor in the economics of Forestry. The won't be sure of the mechanics involve

GORDON LOANE about where money is being spent at THE BRUNSWICKAN UNB and where student tuition money is really going."We hear numerous things UNB Student Council will debate a about how it is getting more expensive motion next week which takes issue with to run a university and having to do the per-course tuition fee policy proposed cutbacks, but the administration has not in the Task Force Report on Tuition and Other Student Fee Policies.

SU President Joie Hellmeister, who vill introduce the motion at Tuesday's regular council meeting, says the per course fee system is not in the best interests of students. Hellmeister told The Brunswickan that students are very concerned about the matter and are worried about a general increase in tuition period.

"I have had a lot of students and Student Union Councilors drop by my office already," she said. "Some are sayinglook I'm in Engineering and this means a considerable increase in my tuition and I'm barely able to afford to go to school right now able to afford to go at all," said Hellmeister, referring to the plight of some students. On the other hand some students think the new system would be great."They are saying-a differential fee would be great." "Why am I subsidizing Engineering students to have labs and computer systems?" they asked. Hellmeister has a number of questions

No supplemental fees at UNB: report

UNB should continue to limit the accordingly," the report states. amount of supplemental fees it charges to students, says a Task Force report on fuition and Other Student Fee Policies. Unlike other universities, UNB does not collect additional moneys from students to support recreational and athletic programs, student services, libraries or the maintenance of computer and laboratory facilities.

In fact the report notes that UNB evies fewer supplementary fees than many other institution

"The advantage of this policy is that students know ahead of time what their total financial obligations will be and are approval by th able to budget their expenses report stated.

The University of New Brunswick has aunched a national search for a new Vice President (Research and International Co-operation) following Dr. Frank Wilson's decision to take early Dr. Wilson is also currently Chair of NB Power. The Vice Presidential post is relatively new to UNB, having been created during Robin Armstrong's tenure as President. Dr. Wilson was the first to hold the position.

The Vice-President (Research and International Co-operation) is responsible being accepted until March 7th. The

Search underway for new UNB V-P to a job advertisement that appears this month in the Canadian Association of University Teachers (CAUT) Bulletin Among other duties, the Vice-Pre is expected to build relations with government, industry and comm agencies to increase research funding and opportunities for faculty and the University. UNB President Dr. Elizabeth Parrinston is Chair of the Vice-President Search Committee.

Nominations and applications are nt is set to begin July

The Task Force recommends that the use of supplementary fees continue to be limited to cases where the use of the related service is optional. It must take place outside the regular period of instruction and must be limited to a small group of students. The University report notes there are cases where supplementary fees are required by government policy, such as for residences and for tuition charged to "Any use of supplementary fees should foreign students. continue to require specific advance approval by the Board of Governors," the collaborate on this issue. matter and a similar concern." Heilmeister concluded.

The Brunswickan • 3

Hellmeister is also not happy that the Task Force discussions took place without tudent representatio Hellmeister has been huddled with other members of the SU Executive preparing a submission for the Task Force that is due by today. She and VP External Anthony Knight plan a joint appearance before the Task Force. Hellmeister has been meeting with Graduate Student Association President Michael Lamoureux in an attempt to

"We all have a similar interest in this

"If they increase it like this, I won't be information technology on the

"It will talk about things like the changing nature of the Canadian economy towards a greater concentration on services and the labour force demand that goes with it," said Cook. We're moving more towards employment in areas like telecommunication, industries which just serve the public - tourism, financial access to personal information, giving our credit card number over the Interne and what that means to individuals in an economic sense," said Cook.

services. A lot of these industries require a lot of information and they require lifferent skills and so there is a demand for people who have specific training

Cook said the course was developed to tie in with UNB's new Multimedia program, but that it will appeal to by technology including Education,

The course represents somewhat of an experiment for the department. Cook said she is not aware of other Economics departments in the country offering a

"We're probably one of the early departments as far as this kind of Constantine Passaris, Economics

professor and Human Rights

Commissioner for New Brunswick, will teach the course, which will also focus on the implications of information

"You'd be talking about invasion of technology in terms of human rights.

tiative goes," she said.

ivacy issues, where co

adents in different faculties affected omputing Science and Engineering.

se areas."

similar course.

The effect of economics on humans is also the focus of two more new courses to be offered by the department in the fall. Economics in Everyday Life and Economics and Public Policy will be offered as the foundation for a new major program, The Economic Studies,

SU Health Plan reviewed

AARON MACEACHERN

THE BRUNSWICKAN

Vice-President (Student Services) Trish Davidson is expected to present a report soon on the UNB Student on Health Plan to the SU Council. As it stands, Davidson is unclear whether a change in the Health Plan fee, which currently stands at $95, will be necessary for next year.

"Student claims are up somewhat this year, and this doesn't leave us much room to decrease the fee," commented Davidson. Students who are hoping for a decrease in the Health Plan fee, ought to look elsewhere.

Davidson also pointed out that the manner in which administrative costs associated with the Health Plan are calculated has been changed back to what it was in 1995-96. According to Davidson, formerVP of Finance Duncan Fulton had recommended that all the Health Plan Administration Fee be transfered to the UNB Student Union as general revenue. Costs associated with the Health Plan would then be expensed from the SU budget.

The result of this policy was the Union collecting $11,500 in fees, yet according to the SU audit of the 1995-96 fiscal year, the Union incurred only $3,056 in expenses related to the administration of the Health Plan during that year. The result was an excess of revenues of $8,500. This was predicted by then VP Fulton in the April 23, 1996 issue of The Brunswickan, where he indicated that this money could then be used for other purposes. transferred from the Health Plan to the Salaries line item for permanent SU staff, which represented their assistance and administration of the plan," explained Davidson. According to Davidson, Fulton's ecommendation was not implemented. One possible reason for this mix-up may have been a lack of communicati during the transition of SU executives last Spring.

Since UNB students also have the opportunity to opt-out of the plan, the numbers who do can potentially affect the level of the premium. "Fifty-eight percent of students stayed on the plan this past year," said Davidson. "The amount of students on the plan increased. But at the same time students seem to be claiming a little more." The final decision on fees for the 1997-98 year will be decided in a meeting between Davidson and the Health Plan's insurance brokers, Morneau & Associates, in the coming weeks. Davidson will also be releasin a detailed report on the finances of the Health Plan for the past year. She will be making recommendations to SU Council and the UNB Administration. Owing to the complexities of the Health Plan, Davidson expressed her worries for the future of the Health Plan. "I'm actually a bit worried about it to be honest," she said. "The general administrator [Barb Kirk] is still out on long-term disability and [indications are that she] will not be back right away next year."

"It does take some help when you first start," she conceeded."If I didn't have the general administrator's help "This past July, $11,000 was when I first started, I would have been lost'

offered by the department starting in be available this April. The course will September. Students may opt out of be offered on-line through Open Access Economics 1000 in favour of the new learning in part, Cook said, because of Schools.

already in hand."

all the test banks."

ational presence of UNB, according for a term of five years.

Changes to copyright laws could mean rising prices Heritage, the government proposed

Continued from page 1 McConnell said there have been several occasions of Canadian distributors have lost orders or have not been able to get the books to him for the beginning of classes. Although he estimates that sevent to eighty per cent of the books for the UNB Bookstore come from Toronto, he said there are times when American distributors are faster and less expensive. "The other aspect of it that's always a concern is that once we're not allowed to get books from American book distributors who have better distribution, prices can go up," warned McConnell. He said that because the Canadian market is significantly smaller than the American one, Canadian publishers with smaller print runs may GORDON LOANE charge more per title or may sometim ruise the price on a book to recover losses on another publication. McConnell said he hopes that students and professors will protest the proposed changes. If the ciation of UNB Teachers hasn't groups shaking their heads.

Ass

made a good strong presentation to the Federal government it's too bad because they'll be here protesting to House of Commons last April by Heritage Minister Sheila Copps. It us [when the books aren't here in contained certain exemptions from time for their classes]," he pointed out. paying copyright fees for libraries. John Tooth is Chair of the CLA Copyright Committee of the Minister John Manley and authors, Canadian Library Association and he is also concerned about what the changes could mean to students, particularly the part of the legislation that affects the importation of used books.

"The end result is that students are going to pay more money because there will not be the option of used books," said Tooth. "If the used books are in Canada, that is fine, but if the used text books are in the U.S.A., the bookstore would not be able to bring them in and sell them at a price less than you would have to pay for the brand new title." "That certainly could cost students a pile of cash," said Tooth.

He also questioned whether publishers who have lobbied for the protection putting an end to the practise of parallel offered by the amendment know how much or how little volume they lose to American distributors. "My major concern has been and will cont be our problem of actually getting these foreign books here when we need them." The amendment to the Copyright Act was put forward by the Department of Canadian Heritage, and is intended to protect Canadian culture. It was presented to Parliament in June of last vear it aims "to holster Canadian identity and to encourage job creation." In a speech from Hon. Lucienne Robillard, then Minister of Canadian of the Canadian Booksellers Association

Bill C-32 was introduced in the tions, archives and museums.

Under intense pressure from Industry composers and publishers to remove the

has been forced to take the whole matter back to the federal cabinet.

exemptions, Heritage Minister Copps

Bill C-32 is one of the first bills on the order paper when the House of Commons re-convenes next week. John

Tooth, Chair of the CLA Copyright

Association calls the whole situation

very unusual

ommittee of the Canadian Library

Back in 1989 when phase one of copyright legislation was passed, there appeared to be an agreement between the library community and the creative community about exemptions on copyright fees for libraries, etc.

"Canadian publishers and book distributers spend a great deal of money and energy negotiating with copyright holders and original publishers for the right to sell their books in Canada. Some institutional buyers circumvent the exclusive Canadian distributors by ordering directly from foreign suppliers.

It is called parallel importation," said Robillard. However, the part of the amend affecting the importation of used books was introduced later, and representatives

Ministers haggle over proposed legislation introduced last April the creative community suddenly decided if any of A tug of war between two federal these exemptions went through the cabinet ministers over proposed world would come to an end and amendments to the Copyright Act has libraries would be ripping off the left officials at two of Canada's lobby creative community," Tooth told The Brunswickan.

THE BRUNSWICKAN

> University libraries in Canada for example already have agreements with Can Copy (The Canadian Copyright Licensing Agency) which collects royalties from licensed photocopiers including provincial school systems and universities and distributes them to writers who belong to the collective. According to Tooth, the bottom line for university libraries is that Can Copy fees will likely be reduced if two exemptions are left in Bill C-32.

One exemption would allow library users to make single copies for the purpose of academic research without having to pay a royalty fee. A second exemption would apply to inter-library loans, which increasingly take the form of photocopies of the requested text. "Let's say the exemptions pass, what will happen is that there will be a renegotiation of the licenses with Can Copy," Tooth said. "It could be that a smaller amount of money will be paid to the creative community as a result of Hough concluded.

"But that all remains to be seen " said Tooth, referring to the uncertainty now surrounding the legislation and the intense lobbying to get the government to finally come down on the side of libraries or the creative comm

Meanwhile, the Canadian Alliand of Students Association (CASA) is calling the possible removal of exemptions in Bill C-32 for both education institutions and libraries "counter productive and absurd."

"The exceptions that presently exist regarding the use of copyright material for educational purposes are an absolute necessity," said Matthew Hough, National Director of CASA. speaking to the Brunswickan from his Ottawa office.

"The use of educational material in the classroom and the exchange of information between libraries is an integral part of learning," he said.

"I urge Heritage Minister Sheila Copps and the House of Commons Standing Committee on Canadian Heritage to consider carefully the impact that any changes to current practices, including Bill C-32, will have on our educational system," are protesting. They assert that this is not a cultural issue but a trade issue. one that will bring Canadian publishers $545,000 in profit at the expense of students.

3

14

McConnell said that for his part, he has been trying to raise awareness to the downside of the proposed legislation and has written to Andy Scott, MP for York-Sunbury, assertin that the government has been too heavily influenced by publishers and needs to take the concerns of booksellers and their customers into consideration as well.

WITH A FILE BY GORDON LOANE "But immediately after Bill C-32 was exceptions that have been agreed to."