THE KHAN OF FARMERS.

That whimsical, but big-hearted genius, the Khan, who awoke one morning to find himself famous, after writing "The Men of the Northern Zone," has been discussing, in the Hamilton Herald, the relations tween Canadian farmers and the "Home" boys who are brought out to this country and committed to the tender care of strangers, not always with the best results. The Khan, who is a farmer himself, hands this rather left-handed compliment to the 'American and Canadian farmer:

"The average American farmer and that embraces the Canadian, of course,—is a pretty hard and exact-ing boss. Boss is the right word. 'Baas' would be fitter, for some farmers treat their 'ome boys as the brutal and semi-barbaric Boer treated his wretched Hottentot or Kaffir slave. The population of the towns and cities is continually swollen by the sons of farmers who hadn't the life of a dog at home. If a man man't or won't treat his own sons "white," what may be expected of a legalized ruffian when a helpless or-phan in a strange land is placed by the law, or the proper authorities in his power? Some of these boys are insufferably impudent, obstinate, sulky, and a few of them are positively vicious; but these can be bundled back to the 'ome again. If the farmers could only unite and have a printed list circulated half-yearly among them, giving the names and qualifications of 'ome boys, it would be a good thing. But the farmers can unite on nothing. Everyone for himself and the devil take the hindermost! But some kindly farmers attempt too much. To try to make a farmer out of the scum of a London slum is too big an undertaking. And now, when my hand is in, I'm going to say this: The young men of this Country don't marry early enough, and far too many of them don't marry at all. It wouldn't do any harm to appoint a royal commission to an quire why the birth rate is so low in Ontario, and why so many farme have to import boy help from Seven

BRITISH RESPECT FOR LAW, Canadian Mute.

If there is one thing more than any other that British subjects in all parts of the empire have reason to be proud of, it is the respect for law that prevails among all classes, and the firm and impartial manner in which justice is administered. Sir, Conan Doyle has been making some investigations into this subject and, among others, produces the following suggestive and striking comparisons: The British army in South Africa lost, during three years, 22,000 men. from all causes; in three years the United States lost 31,000 men from homicide. London, with 6,000,000 inhabitants, had 24 murders last year; Chicago, with less than 2,000,000, had 128. Of London's 24 murderers, 9 were hanged; of Chicago's 128, 1 was hanged. The single States of Geor-gia and South Carolina had each more murders than the whole British Em-

THE UNION OF

THE FLAGS

The following splendid patriotic poem is from the pen of that gifted and popular Maple City son, Dr. A. W. Thornton. During his recent visit to St. Louis he was called on to address the great international banquer and concluded with these lines, It is needless to say they received an ovation and have received most flattering attention in all the southern papers.

The Planet is fortunate in being privileged to reproduce them privileged to reproduce them:

THE UNION OF THE FLAGS. In God's own image, man was made.—
The likeness still remains,
Where men have true foundations laid—

laid—
Or fought 'gainst tyrant's chains
Such men must push oppression back
Then Heaven will ring with mirth
And the Stars and Stripes, and Union

Jack, Shall dominate the earth.

When freedom was denied our sires In lands, beyond the seas, To worship, as the heart desires, The God they sought to please; They found new homes, they tuned

their pipes
To liberty's sweet strain;
The Union Jack, and Stars and Stripes
That liberty maintain.

In other lands our brothers toil, Beneath oppression's load;
They vainly seek to own the soil;
They feel the tyrant's goad,
Do we, the fellow-feeling lack?
Is freedom's spirit lost?
Shall the Stars and Stripes and Union
Lack

But stand to count the cost?

Or shall we say to those down trod
"Tis time such things should cease?"
And liberty—best gift of God—
Throughout the world increase,
With hand to plough—shall we turn

, back From fellowman accursed? Shall the Stars and Stripps and Union Jack Not see their shackles burst?

A larger, fuller, happier life— For this let all men pray. An end to international strife When men their brothers slay. For Eden's peace shall then on

For Eden's peace suan then back;
And war's black flag be furled;
When the Stars and Stripes an
Union Jack
Shall dominate the world,

June 10.—Tilbury races yesterday were among the most successful ever held here. All four events filled and held here. All four events filled and every heat was closely contested. There was a large crowd in attendance, a conservative estimate being 1500 people present. The day was an ideal one, and the committee are to be congratulated upon their success in overcoming the onus of two postponements. The three Chatham horses were most unfortunate, not one of them winning. The following were the results, half-mile heats:

Death of Glengarry's Daughter.

It seems wonderful to read of the seath of a daughter of the Highland chief whe was the original of Fergus MacIvor in "Waverley." Mrs Farbes, mother of Sir William Forbes of Pitsligo, who has just sled at the age of eighty-four, was a daughter of Alexander MacDonell, the sizteenth chief of Glengarry, who was an intimate friend of Scott, and there are many references to him in Lockhart's delightful biography of his father-in-law. "Gles garry" was the last Highland chiefts who kept up the ancient feudal cutoms as far as possible, and he alway traveled in bestiful state with a "ta of clansmen in attendance.

He died in 1828, leaving his imme property heavily incumbered. His and successor emigrated to Austrian the estates of Glengarry and (quoich were sold in 1840 for £12 to the late Lord Dudley, then Ward purchased by Edward Ellic ("the Bear"), and they now belong the His daughter-in-law.
