QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. Miscellaneous.

ABORTING MARE.

Mare, due to foal in April, aborted a few days ago. Would you advise breeding her again this year? C. E. M.

Ans.—It would be tolerably safe to breed her again in two months, but we would advise delaying the breeding until warm weather, say first of June.

POTATOES FOR COWS—ALFALFA SEED PER ACRE.

1. Are potatoes good for milk cows, and how much should one give at a feed?
2. How much alfalfa should you sow per acre? A SUBSCRIBER

Ans.—1. Potatoes are excellent for milk cows if fed in moderation. A half-peck would probably be enough at a feed.
2. Twenty pounds of alfalfa seed per acre should be sown.

STAVE SILO.

1. As I have been thinking of building a silo, and have timber of my own, I would like to know how balsam and spruce would answer the purpose, and how thick and how wide the timber should be cut?

2. If I built it 24 feet high, would the lumber need to be full length, or could I splice it?

3. Would it be of any use painting it with tar inside or out? I would build a round silo. W. A. R.

Ans.—1. Balsam and spruce lumber would, no doubt, be quite suitable for silo staves, though they might not last so long as pine. Each piece should be not more than six inches wide and 14 or 2 inches thick. Where convenient, it is usual to have the inner side of staves planed and the edges planed and jointed so that in thickness and width the staves are uniform throughout.

2. Most high wooden silos are made with two lengths in each stave. For a 24-foot silo, 16-foot lumber would be suitable. In such case, one stave would have a 16-foot length below, and an 8-foot piece above. The next stave would have the short length below and the long one above, and so on.

3. Painting is not commonly practiced. It frequently does more harm than good. Would advise you to write to J. H. Gridale, of the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, for his bulletin on silo building, which gives very complete directions for erecting stave silos.
