A SALAD OF GOOD STORIES.

There are two rival undertakers in an eastern city, each of whom is naturally anxious to obtain all the patronage possible. One of these undertakers rejoices in a son and heir who shares his paternal parent's proper pride in the success of the establishment. A citizen of the town had been lying dangerously ill for some time with typhoid fever, and the two professional men were anxiously awaiting the decision between themselves. The patient died, and a chance passer-by saw the small son of the afore-said executing an impromptu war dance in the front yard of his paternal mansion, while he loudly announced over the fence to all the neighbors: "Hooray! Father's got him! Father's got him!"

There is a solicitor in town who is telling of a little experience he lately had with an odd character from the rural districts. It seems that the granger went to the lawyer's office for the purpose of getting a deed made out for some swamp land that he was selling. The listener of woes heard the old man's request and then picking up pen and paper he proceeded to jot down the particulars in the deal.

"Your name?" from the attorney.
"Phillip Ward," from the farmer.
"What is your wife's name?"
"Eliza A. Ward."
"Eliza A.; what does the A stand for?"

"I don't know, never asked her," replied Mr. Ward, unconcernedly.
"Don't you know your wife's middle name and you an old man and married to her for a good many years, as you say. Why this is rich. What's the reason you never asked her what her middle name was?"

"Well, see here young fellow," returned the uninquisitive Ward, "I'm a pretty independent cuss, allus have been and allus intend to be, and the fact is I'm too independent to ask her."
