of New York-a tribe who keep pretty close together through their association-took a sort of census of the business. They found in Manhattan alone 225 hotels of fifty rooms or more, with grand total of 53,000 rooms. Which means, according to the usual rush business way of counting, that in a pinch the hotels of Manhattan-the real hotels, not including little fellows, apartment houses and such-could take in and give beds to 100,000 visitors.
