Thus does Henry James, heralded to the reading public of Great ing and conscientious clergymen. Britain as a celebrated American in the good graces of a high toned element of European society whose popular fad is the suppression of child-birth. What new-fangled doctrine is this which he so boldly propounds? It is surely one which all honest men and women must condemn without a second thought. France has raised the cry "No More Children". Australia has repeated it. Slowly but surely it is undermining both France and Australia and it wil undermine other nations or countries as well. To defraud nature, observes Zola, "under mines the defrauders both morally and eventually physically." The continual cheating of Nature, the resort to artificial means to combine the endless gratification strength so necessary for the of passion with the avoidance of cure of consumption and the endless repression of that lifethat force by which alone a new force can be infused,-by, which alone a people can grow and expand is the practice of a moribund society and according to the uses or abuses of this practice a nation may guage the rapidity of its annihilation.
