The great result of the work of this year carried on at Memphis by Prof. Flinders Petrie under the auspices of the British School of Archaeology has been the discovery of the palace of King Apries, the Pharaoh Hophra of the Bi- ble, who was contemporary with Jere- miah, B. C. 629-588. Hitherto no palace has ben known in Egypt other than the tower at Medinet Habu and some portions of a rather ear- lier late. The palace was 400 feet long and 200 feet broad, with a middle court 100 feet square. It was adorned with painted columns forty feet high and sur- rounded with stone lined walls fifteen feet thick. The approach to the palace ied up through a large mass of buildings to a platform at a height about sixty feet above the plain. In the ruins scale armor, hitherto rarely found in Egypt, was discovered. Good bronze figures of the gods were	Parisienne at the Seaside. Paris, July 6.— Smart Frenchwomen will adopt the directoire style in their bathing dresses at the coming seaside season, so as to preserve the slender, elongated shape that this style of gown gives them ashore: They will wear corsets made of stiff eloth with flexible quill ribs instead of whalebones, the corsets being kept in place by suspenders over the shoulders. A tight fitting culotte is an indispen- sable feature of the costume, a close cut princess gown covering all. The outfit is completed by stockings and high laced shoes matching the color of the dress.
