

AFTER SUFFERING YEARS

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Fox Creek, N.B.—"I have always had pains in the loins and a weakness there, and often after my meals in my food would distress me and cause soreness. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me much good. I am stronger, digestion is better, and I can walk with ambition. I have encouraged many mothers of families to take it, as it is the best remedy in the world. You can publish this in the papers."—Mrs. WILLIAM BOUQUET, Fox Creek, N.B., Canada.

The above is only one of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which prove beyond a doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, actually does cure these obstinate diseases of women after all other means have failed, and that every suffering woman owes it to herself to at least give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial before submitting to an operation, or giving up hope of recovery.

Mrs. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health and her advice is free.

A MYSTERIOUS QUEST.

CHAPTER XL
The Wheel Becomes a Rack.
(Concluded.)

Hardly daring to hope, Jenny went to the parlor door and stepped in. The man whom she most wanted to see in all the world stood before her.

Immediately she was seized by a great trepidation, and when Mr. Degraw, seeing this, came forward and offered her a chair, she found it difficult to recover herself. But she did so at last, being forced to by his silence; and, having nerved herself to look up, did so with a certain resolution.

But she had no sooner met his eyes, than her own fell again. It was not the reproach in them that affected her, but the grief. There were tears on his cheeks, and she seemed wholly unconscious of them. Such a sight she had never looked upon before.

"Shall I kneel for pardon?" she faintly murmured, holding her two arms outspread in an attitude of profound contrition. "I feel that it is the only fitting position for me to take toward one whom I have wronged profoundly."

He took a quick step forward. "On the contrary," said he, "I feel indebted to you for your act of courage."

This Home-made Cough Syrup Will Surprise You
Stops Even Whooping Cough Quickly. A Family Supply at Small Cost.

Here is a home-made remedy that takes hold of a cough instantly, and will usually cure the most stubborn case in 24 hours. This recipe makes a quantity enough for a whole family. You couldn't buy as much or as good ready-made cough syrup for $2.50. Mix two cups of granulated sugar with one cup of warm water, and stir two minutes. Put 2 1/2 ounces of Pinex (fifty cents worth) in a 16-ounce bottle, and add the Sugar Syrup. This keeps perfectly and has a pleasant taste—children like it. Braces up the appetite and is slightly laxative, which helps end a cough. You probably know the medical value of pine in treating asthma, bronchitis and other throat troubles, sore lungs, etc. There is nothing better. Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway white pine extract, and contains all the natural healing pine elements. Other preparations will not work in this formula. The prompt results from this inexpensive remedy have made friends for it in thousands of homes in the United States and Canada, which explains why the plan has been imitated often, but never successfully. A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

age. Had you left me in ignorance of the truth, only to have it revealed to me hereafter in some unforeseen way, you would then have wronged me irreparably. As it is, I may grieve over a vanished dream and bewail a fallen idol, but I cannot meet you with blame or load you with reproaches."

She gave him an eloquent look, she uttered a grateful cry, and the hands which had been stretched out in utter abandonment came together and clasped themselves upon her breast. "This is mercy," said she, and a happy smile rose on her lips, before which his eyes fell. "Twice have you been my benefactor!" she exclaimed, "and this time you are a greater one than before."

He bowed, but made no reply. This interview was a trying one to him. "And my letter?" she ventured, timidly.

"Shall be retained by me amongst my most secret papers."

"Retained!" She turned pale and stepped forward. "I had hoped—"

she stammered. "I am ready to pray that you will give it back to me, or at least destroy what can be of no further benefit to you."

But he gave her no encouragement in this direct on.

"It is all I have to show that this great property has returned to me through your voluntary act," he objected. "I dare not part with your letter, Miss Rogers, but I will not use it except I am driven to it."

"Mr. Degraw, you are generous; you have shown it in every act of your life. Do not, then, deny me this boon, upon the granting of which my whole future depends. I am intending to be immediately married; you know to whom. It is my only refuge, my only hope. But how can I ask him to fulfil his promise when I know there is a sword hanging over my head, ready to fall at any moment?"

"You cannot, Miss Rogers; I realize this as well as you do yourself." From being pale, she turned livid. Her lips opened and her eyes stared at him like those of a culprit hearing sentence of unexpected doom.

"And you would destroy me utterly!" she murmured. "You would deliver me to destruction or to my own remorse, which is the same thing. You cannot mean it, Mr. Degraw."

"I grieve—it tears my heart—Miss Rogers, but I cannot see my duty in any other light. Remember that this money must go to another, that I shall have to explain to her, if not to the world, how I came to receive it, such from one who had publicly held it for three months."

"If—if you will give it to the little school-teacher—she already knows," he said. "That is," she added as she saw his look of astonishment; "she knows enough to be satisfied. I told her that the man I expected to marry exacted the giving up of this fortune."

"It is not enough."

"Why? Why?"

"The world is bitter, exacting, ever ready to attribute wrong motives to a man. If I receive back this money—a great amount, you must constantly recollect—society will naturally decide against my honesty and the purity of my intentions. It will say that I made the gift to you upon the condition that you married me, and that my taking it back is in consequence of your failure to keep your engagement. For that engagement short as it was, is known. Contrary to my usual habit of reticence, I spoke of it yesterday to your dearest friend, and was overheard by Mr. Bodwell, who must have told fifty others in the few hours that have since elapsed. If honor is dear to woman, it is equally dear to man. My future happiness and high standing are trembling in the balance, and the moment is as serious for me as for you."

"But I will write another letter. I will say that I entreat your acceptance of this gift, which I find entails too many duties upon me for my peace of mind. And this you can show the world; and when I am married, people will understand."

"Miss Rogers"—his tone was tender, almost paternal—"do you think you ought, under any circumstances, to marry Mr. Degraw?"

She arose, she drew up her exquisite lips, she panted and flung back, in her desperation, this answer: "I love him. I give up a great fortune for him. I needed not have given it up if I had not been pleased to do so. If all this does not make me worthy of him, then there is no such thing as repentance, and reparation is a mere word."

"You are right," he murmured; "but if he knew—"

"But he never will know, if you give me back my letter. For his sake, whose life will be ruined if any whisper of all this comes to his ears, have compassion upon me, Mr. Degraw. You know by what I have written you that I am not a bad woman. If I marry the man who trusts me, I will be a good one. Though I have wronged you, hum-

Stomach Misery Just Vanishes.

No Indigestion, Sourness, Gas or Dyspepsia five minutes later.

As there is often some one in your family who suffers an attack of Indigestion or some form of Stomach trouble, why don't you keep some Diapepsin in the house handy?

This harmless blessing will digest anything you can eat without the slightest discomfort, and overcome a sour, gassy Stomach five minutes after.

Tell your pharmacist to let you see the formula, plainly printed on these 50-cent cases of Pape's Diapepsin, then you will readily see why it makes Indigestion, Sour Stomach, Heartburn and other distress go in five minutes, and relieves at once such miseries as Belching of Gas, Eructations of sour, undigested food, Nausea, Headaches, Dizziness, Constipation and other Stomach disorders.

Some folks have tried so long to find relief from Indigestion and Dyspepsia or an out-of-order stomach with the common, every-day cures advertised that they have almost made up their minds that they have something else wrong, or believe theirs is a case of Nervousness, Gastritis, Catarrh of the Stomach or Cancer.

This, no doubt, is a serious mistake. Your real trouble is, what you eat does not digest; instead, it ferments and sours, turns to acid, Gas and Stomach poison, which putrefy in the digestive tract and intestines, and besides, poison the breath with nauseous odors.

A hearty appetite, with thorough digestion, and without the slightest discomfort or misery of the stomach, is waiting for you as soon as you decide to try Pape's Diapepsin five minutes.

to him a temporary peace. Life was not so easy to bear under any circumstances, that one could to weight it with unnecessary regrets. He would abide by it; but the ordeal had been sharp and he had almost succumbed to it. This he must always remember to his everlasting chagrin.

When Jenny returned with her letter and bade him read it, he did so dispassionately and with evident approval.

"This will answer very well. I will now return to my hotel for the other," he declared, and left her with a low bow, in which she felt a certain respect expressed that was like balm to her crushed and bleeding heart.

Ten minutes, fifteen, twenty elapsed. A half-hour passed, and Jenny looked for his return. Though the minutes had legged, they were not heavy. Hope had beamed again above the horizon and her heart was already revivifying under its influence. Three-quarters of an hour, and no number of his carriage was heart. But then, a friend might have been waiting in his rooms, or some other detention, equally difficult to avoid, happened to prolong his stay. He would come before the hour is over; she knew it by her throbbing heart and eager pulses; and he did. Just as the clock was on the point of striking the hour, his carriage drove up, and he bounded to the walk, ran up the steps, and was let in by the waiting Clair-ette. Jenny stood in the parlor ready to receive him.

"What is it?" she cried, for she saw at a glance that he was greatly distressed.

"The letter is gone! It has been stolen! I cannot find it among the documents you returned to me! You have an enemy somewhere, and that enemy has your honor in his hand."
