THE TRUE PATRIOT.

the average man's salary (I am not thinking now of those classes of workers who by force and threats have pushed up their own wages at the expense of other men).

But, at the same time, there is a tendency to spend even more than one needs to spend to have what we need to have "befo de wah."

Here is an example of the sort of thing I mean.

Price Was Not to Be Mentioned.

A man told me that he and his wife went to a hotel in a certain city and asked for a room. The clerk handed him the pen to register and called the bell-boy to take the bags. Evidently the question of price was not to be mentioned. But, the man was not of the sort who is ashamed to ask how much a thing is before he buys it, and he asked what the charge was.

"Ten dollars a day per person," said the clerk.

The man could perfectly well pay that, but he didn't think the accommodations which he had gotten at that hotel in times past were worth it.

"Too much," he said, and laid down his pen.

Is There Anyone More Haughty?

"Of course," said the clerk in the haughty manner of his kind. "We have cheaper rooms. There are some for $5 and $7."

They took the rooms and found them satisfactory.

Now a great many men would not have asked "How much," and would of course, have been given the $10 rooms. Then they would have gone away to talk, half indignantly, half proudly. Ourselves, you noticed this sort of pride in the voices of those who complain about high prices they have paid! at the high cost of living.

In fact, the way the above story happened to be told was that another man had spoken of that hotel and said that the rate was $10 a day.

Shoes that Used to Cost $5.

If you go into a shop and ask for shoes, the clerk will doubtless show some of the shoes which represent not only the greater cost of leather but the greater attention to style and finish which characterizes to-day's shoes. And the price is going to represent these two factors. But if you say "Will you show me the kind of shoes for which I used to pay $5, you have some chance of seeing a shoe at which the increased price represents only the increased cost of leather (which is plenty).

This is a time for thrift. It is a time for wise buying. It is a time not to be afraid to ask the price of a thing before you buy it. The man or woman who does these things is the true patriot.

Scotland's New Saint.

Lorna Pounds, the charming actress now appearing in Pretty Peggy, recently told me an amusing story about a couple of sailors on a certain tramp steamer who were sworn enemies.

One was an Irishman and the other a Scotsman, and (said Lorna) the rest of the crew had become adepts in egging them on to chip one another on subjects affecting their respective nationalities.

One day "patron saints" was the subject, of which the Scotsman knew nothing, and the Irishman just a little.

"Who was the patron saint of Ireland?" asked Jock.

"Do you mean to say you don't know?" said Pat. "Why, the holy St. Patrick!"

"Well," said Jock, in deliberate tones, "hang your St. Patrick!"

In a towering rage the Irishman hesitated a second while he thought of something equally effective, and then burst out with: "And hang your Harry Lauder!"

Flogging Burglars.

Ancient British law has been revived by London justices in dealing with burglars and petty criminals. Lashes on the bare back with the cat-o-nine-tails used to be a favorite sentence, but in modern times it has practically been abandoned. Alarmed at the rapid spread of crime, however, Justice Horridge revived the old-time law and has sentenced Walter Wetton and Walter Brown, convicted highwaymen, to the "cat."

"I want it to be understood that I shall not hesitate in proper cases to inflict the punishment I am going to do on you two men. You will receive twelve lashes from the "cat." This was the judge's dictum and other courts are following suit.

Burglary in England is a profession followed practically with impunity at the present time. Government post offices seem to be favorite places for the thieves to operate. Bond Street shops are raided nightly and frequently warehouses containing costly silks and furs have been cleaned out by burglars using automobile trucks to carry away the loot. But few of the offenders have been captured by the police.

The revival of the "cat" and other medieval forms of punishment should, it is thought by the authorities, have a salutary effect on criminals. Prison sentences seem to have no effect on the hardened offender, but physical pain will, it is thought, have the desired effect of preventing wholesale crime.

Just Folks

SPRING FEVER.

The simplest tasks seemed hard to do. I dragged my way about the place. I felt all right, and yet I knew I feared the work I had to face; The children seemed to worry me, And that's a sign that something's wrong. I thought of dreadful things to be— And then I heard a robin's song.

I scolded over little things. And stopped the youngsters at their play. It seemed my nerves were jumping springs. For I was finding fault all day; My hands would not obey my will. I had no relish for my food. I'd lost my cunning and my skill, And I was in a bitter mood.

Then green appeared upon the trees And robins broke the day with song. And from the south there came a breeze Which brought the scent of flowers along; I turned my back upon it all, Drugged every task and stole away, And went where neither door nor wall Make prisoners of human clay.

I watched the white clouds drifting by And heard the chirruping of birds, And heard no sound of selfish words; Found pictures to delight the eye Far more than man has ever learned.

And I could bear my bit of woe And smile once more, when I returned.

Muslin Comes From Mosul.

More cases have been reported to the profiteering tribunals in connection with articles of clothing of various kinds than with anything else.

Few people realise that the names of the materials from which clothes are made come from nearly all parts of the world, showing how many different nations it required at one time to provide the clothes one now wears.

Cambric, for example, is named after the famous city of Cambrai, in France, made doubly famous since 1914. Muslin, on the other hand, is named from Mosul, right away on the banks of the Tigris in Asia, while calico comes from Calicut, a town in India which was once celebrated for its cotton cloth.

Damask, as most people know, takes its name from Damascus, in Syria, while silk and serge are both derived from the same Latin word series, meaning the Chinese. It was from northern China that these two fabrics first came to Europe. Velvet is also a Latin word meaning fleece, while alpaca comes from an animal of the same name which lives in Peru, in South America.

BORN THAT WAY.

Some folks are born with spirits sour, their nature is to whine; the planets, at their natal hour, were badly out of line. They came complaining to the earth, and squawk through all their days, and they can see no sense in mirth, they frown on joyous joys. They choose the grimmest sort of creed that's filled with threats of pain; for there is naught will fit their need, that's pleasant, kind or sane. They are the sad and gloomy freaks who groan with every breath, who see the bloom on maiden cheeks and talk of worms and death. In vain the optimist may try to cheer up gents like these; they'll answer with a dismal sigh his gladdest, brightest wheeze. They'll say his logic, blithe and brave, is merely sounding brass; they'll drool a while about the grave, and claim all flesh is grass. They make me weary and distraught when I with them commune; by them December chill is brought into the midst of June. And oh, I pity such poor guys, who cannot laugh, who wipe the briny from their eyes, and quote an epiphany.
