ng an investigation into motor thefts. t developed that there was a club of oung men in Parkdale, candidates for which, in order to be eligible for nembership, had to steal an expensive car. They could practice on Fords and other low priced machines, but could not be admitted until they got away with a big car. All they were after was excitement, and the courts are inclined to let such culorits off with a warning, but this has effect on others, and the practice till goes on. Some judges would ike to have these youngsters whipped, but there appear to be some le parents consent. There should, however, be no trouble, for if the parents had the choice of seeing the boy get a sound spanking, or a stiff jail erm, they would prefer the former for their erring offspring.
