The Kingston Whig says: "Feeling against S. Weaver, fancy goods' dealer, over the disastrous failure, has been intensified by the investigation into his accounts. These include a fur cloak bought in a Kingston store, and a gold watch and diamond ring procured in Montreal for members of his family, all within a few days of his failure. It is stated that he sold fancy goods for which the wholesale charged $2 10 for 90 cents. It seems to have been expected by many for two weeks prior to his assignment that he was going to fail immediately after Christmas, but wholesalers had too much faith in him to believe the imputation. He began refusing drafts on one plea or another early in December."
