Mrs. (Gen.) Booth-Su Trial of Mrs. Monette and Philip Lamoureaux—The Accused Acquitted

Francois Parent, father of the female prisoner, gave the most sensational evidence in the case. He visited Casselman on the day Monette's bedy was found and saw Lamoureaux and his daughter there. Lamoureaux said: "At it is the most sensation of the day Monette's bedy was found and saw Lamoureaux said: "It is I who done it. I must find out who did the harm." He (Lamoureaux) said: "It is I who done it. I put him from my way." About 35 witnesses were examined.

Constantineau, counsel for the defense, made an address, which lasted two hours and a half. It was possible, he said, and most probable that Monette committed salicide. Mr. Britton, Crown prosecutor, made a lengthy reply, speaking an hour and a quarter. The Judge's charge was severely against the prisoner. It was the Crown's theory that the whole plot had been laid out by the female prisoner and carried out by Lamoureaux. Notwithstanding this the jury, after being absent 1 hour and 45 minutes, returned a verdict of 'mot guilty," much to the surprise of the audience. Lamoureaux throughout the entire trial did not show the least excitement. The female prisoner kept her face well out of sight during the trial, and seemed to feel her position keenly.
