

"CAN I GET WELL?"

If Your Trouble comes from the Kidneys, or from
Kidney Poisons in the Blood,

YES!

And if you have been ailing a long time don't lose your courage. It takes a little time—takes some constitutions longer than others. But Doan's Kidney Pills will gradually drain the poisons out of your system; the pain in your back will stop; the sediment in the urine will cease; there will be no rheumatic pains; you will feel freer and brighter, and when the last of the poisons have gone you will be well.

There is no way of getting the kidney poisons out of the system except through the kidneys, and no medicine so effective in taking them out as Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mr. W. Perkins, South Maitland, N.S., writes: "I feel it my duty to let you know of the great cure I have obtained by using Doan's Kidney Pills. For six months I could not obtain a good night's rest, had to get up four or five times to urinate, and the urine was very thick and red. I commenced using Doan's Kidney Pills and in a very short time I was right and fit again. I am very thankful to have found so speedy a cure."

A ROYAL WARD

By Percy J. Brebner, author of "Princess Maritza," "Vayenne," etc.

They spoke only at intervals on the return journey, and then mere commonplace. Sir Rupert and Dubuissou drove direct to Bury street, but, as previously arranged, Hyde and Baxter dismissed their coach in the neighborhood of Hyde Park Toll House and followed on foot. It was Sir Rupert's idea, so that all chance of causing undue attention might be avoided. So Sir Rupert and his companion came to Bury street long before the others.

"You are angry with me, Mr. Dubuissou," said Sir Rupert as he closed the door of his room. "I can put myself in your place. That a man should behave as I have done requires more explanation than I have yet given. I cannot give it before others. Had you refused to return here with me, perhaps if you had never called me out, I should never have made any explanation. The morning's work has not been wasted."

"Then you have not been open with me from the first?" said Dubuissou. "It is my nature to be cautious, and you must have been for my nature. I have had conjectures, but you have told me little by which I might judge whether such conjectures were right. You are cautious, Mr. Dubuissou."

"Whatever caution I may have used seems to have done me little service," was the answer.

"Men have a knack of learning wisdom late," said Sir Rupert; "some leave it so late that they die lacking it, and history accounts them fools. Such, last night, seemed to be my case. With an opponent thirsting to have your blood in the morning, the most obvious way clearly out of the shadows and becomes a pageant of lost opportunities. I sat late thinking of all the good I had missed in life. There was little I could repair or straighten out; indeed, there was only one thing that seemed possible of redemption, and that related to you, Mr. Dubuissou. I wrote you a letter last night to be given to you if anything happened to me this morning. If you open the drawer that table behind you, you will find it."

Dubuissou turned to do so. The drawer was locked, but the key was in the lock. As Dubuissou pulled it open, Sir Rupert took a letter from his pocket.

"I forgot. I gave it to Capt. Hyde and he returned it to me," said Sir Rupert.

But Dubuissou did not turn; he stood bending over the open drawer. Under existing circumstances it will be better to tell you the story than to let you read it," said Sir Rupert, as he began to tear up the letter. Then he looked up and saw Dubuissou's attitude. "What is it that interests you there? That drawer is a usual receptacle for old paper and rubbish."

"And this, where did you get this?" Dubuissou asked, turning and facing him suddenly. His arm was stretched out in his hand was a broken silver cross.

CHAPTER XIX.
The History of the Oath.

Sir Rupert continued to tear the letter in shreds for a few minutes in silence. He looked at the broken cross and then into Dubuissou's face.

"I told you the drawer was full of rubbish."

"This is no rubbish," said Dubuissou.

"Whole, such a cross would be of small value; broken, it is worthless. Why should it interest you?"

"Does it hold a meaning for you, Sir Rupert?"

"It did once. It is a thing of the past. It meant enough then for me to know that it can have no meaning for you now."

Dubuissou laid the cross carefully on the table, and from an inner pocket took the token he had treasured so carefully, and laid the two halves of the cross side by side. They fitted exactly.

Sir Rupert let the fragments of the letter fall to the ground, and laying his hand sharply upon Dubuissou's shoulder turned him round so that he might look into his face. After a few seconds he scrutinized his features closely.

"I do not understand," he said, "I can see no likeness."

"But the name?" said Dubuissou.

"The name tells me nothing. Can you be the son of the man I knew?"

"But the name," urged Dubuissou.

"It was not his own. He called himself Dubois, yes, that has a similar sound, but his real name, it has escaped me. I thought of him always as Dubois."

"Was it Chatillon?" Dubuissou eagerly asked.

Sir Rupert gave one swift glance into his companion's face, as though he were finally deciding whether to trust him or not.

"Chatillon! That was the name."

Dubuissou took Sir Rupert's hand from his shoulder and held it firmly in both of his.

"Forgive me the work this morning," he said. "Blot it out from my memory. I have come near to killing my father's friend. Surely something more memory which my face recalled, must have made you fire into the air."

"I did not consciously connect you with that past friend," Sir Rupert answered, "but heaven alone is responsible for some of our actions. No, I cannot claim the sentiment you pour into me. You were young, and I—well, at least a disappointed man, besides being a seasoned and experienced duelist. I could pledge myself to hit any man in my aim would not be untrue to the varying of a hair's breadth."

CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS. FOR HEADACHE. FOR DIZZINESS. FOR BILIOUSNESS. FOR TORPID LIVER. FOR CONSTIPATION. FOR SALLOW SKIN. FOR THE COMPLEXION.

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

I have sworn to help any man who, directly or indirectly, may further my interests, and pull the strings, not because I fear discovery, but because the longer I can live the greater damage I can do. I met you, Dubuissou, and although I did not connect you with this story, you were, at least, a man coming to England secretly. For all I knew you were a spy, so you would do harm; what did I care? I sent you to the Brazen Serpent. I had no scruple in using you."

"I do not understand why I was kidnapped and taken there afterwards," said Dubuissou, suddenly interrupting him.

"Nor I; but ruffians of all sorts frequent that tavern, well-mannered some of them, but ruffians nevertheless. Your name, although unknown and suggesting nothing in me, may be known to some of these scoundrels, and I have so much reason to hate, and having just cause to fear you, they may have attempted to get rid of you. As you escaped, they set Bow street upon you. That is my solution. I have made it my business to know something of these ruffians, and then there afterwards, said Dubuissou, suddenly interrupting him.

"No, it was nothing to do with me that he met you there. His mentioning Lady Betty Walmisley as likely to give you information is curious, but is explained by the fact that he is a Devon man, and it is generally believed in Devon that the late earl befriended French prisoners and refugees. I do not know whether, it is true or not, I knew little of him."

"The same reason may account for the suspicion concerning Lady Betty," said Dubuissou.

"It may."

"You evidently do not think it does."

"No," Sir Rupert answered slowly, "and I have no reason for not thinking so. Lady Betty Walmisley is beautiful, she is also exceedingly wealthy, and is beside a ward of the king's. Did you know that?"

"Yes, she told me so, but I did not understand that it was common knowledge," Dubuissou was surprised at the accuracy of Sir Rupert's information, for although he had mentioned Lady Betty's visit he had said nothing about the prince in this letter. The omission was not from any desire to withhold a part of his story, but the letter was so essentially Lady Betty's own affair that he had not considered he had a right to mention it.

To Be Continued.

Women in the province of Shima, on the southern coast of Japan, are the sterner sex. They do most of the field work, and are also employed as drivers. They enter the water at all seasons except during the coldest months of the winter. They remain under water some times for more than a minute.

Weak, Nervous Women

THEIR SAD STORY WOULD FILL A BOOK OF COUNTLESS PAGES.

Ever since the world began woman has borne more than her share of suffering. Secret troubles undermine her strength, yet she seldom complains. Ever since she has suffered in the past is no reason why she should forever be dragged down by misery and sleeplessness.

There are periods in the life of every woman when she should exercise great care in the protection of her health. There are times when the slightest cold will bring on troubles that shock the nervous system, weaken the frame and invite disease.

THOUSANDS HAVE BEEN CURED.

This remedy, one that will lift that awful burden and remove the life from which women suffer. The name of this remedy is Ferrozone, which today is a household word throughout the length and breadth of the American continent. New hope has been brought into the life of many a downcast woman, and a new era of health has dawned for thousands who have tried and proved the merit of Ferrozone.

GET BACK STRENGTH AND VIGOR.

Ferrozone is a remedy that acts directly on all the organs and insures functional activity upon which health so largely depends.

Among the troubles that are relieved and cured by Ferrozone are suppressed, painful or irregular menstruation, leucorrhoea (whites), bearing-down pains, womb and ovarian weaknesses and uterine displacements.

FERROZONE MAKES STRONG WOMEN.

Your days of weakness and headache, your hours of nervousness and despondency will all depart. Life will hold forth to you as it does for everyone that uses Ferrozone regularly.

Your whole body will feel the quickening influence of Ferrozone. The blood I care to let me know how it does for everyone that uses Ferrozone regularly.

Cured of Bronchitis
BY CHAMBERLAIN'S COUGH REMEDY

W. E. WHEELER

Bronchitis is a much more serious disease than an ordinary cold, and much more likely to result in pneumonia. It is commonly spoken of as a cold on the lungs. There is little if any danger, however, when Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is judiciously used.

Only Few Doses Required

"Before I learned of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy I suffered with an attack of bronchitis two or three times a year, and each attack seemed to be worse," says W. E. Wheeler, 423 W. Ninth St., Los Angeles, Cal. "The medicine the doctor prescribed seemed to give me relief, but did not afford a cure. My daughter used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in her family, and one day when I was visiting her she advised me to try it. I felt so wretched that I was willing to try almost anything, and so took part of a bottle she had on hand, and then bought a large bottle and one more, and that cured me. Whenever I feel an attack coming on I take a few doses, and I have not been bothered any more. I have much cause to be grateful to the manufacturers of this remedy."

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy

This remedy is especially suited to the treatment of bronchitis, as it causes the expulsion of mucus from the bronchial tubes, making breathing easier, and minimizing the danger of contracting pneumonia. This remedy has a world wide reputation for its cures and can always be depended upon. It contains no opium or other narcotic, and may be given as confidently to a child as to an adult. Price per bottle twenty-five cents, large size fifty cents.

Miss Eva Appleford, who has been visiting her cousin, Miss Letta Belmore, of Springfield, has returned home.

Mr. D. D. Finch is very ill with influenza.

The next meeting of the Women's Institute will be held on Thursday afternoon, 4th inst., at the residence of Mrs. Solomon Parks. Dr. Annie Backus and Mrs. T. Hammond, of Aylmer, will speak.

Miss Anna McCallum, of Gladstone, is visiting Mrs. W. A. Barons.

Mr. Mahlon Bray held a very successful sale on Tuesday last.

Mr. Frederick White still continues to be very low.

Mrs. Sarah Thompson, of St. Thomas, who was visiting her brother, Mr. John H. Charlton, has returned home.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Church of Christ held their weekly meeting on Friday evening. The topic was "Home Missions and Present Day Pioneers." The leader was Miss Gertrude Barons, who was assisted by Miss Mabel White. A reading, entitled "Help Those Women," was given by Miss Myrtle B. Charlton.

Miss Mabel White spent a few days with friends in St. Thomas last week.

Misses Zelma and Mabel Brown have been visiting friends at Gladstone.

Miss Cecilia Loewson, of Vancouver, B. C., who was visiting her sister here, Mrs. J. C. Dance, has returned home.

Mrs. L. Fink, 31 Dowd street, Montreal, Que., says:

"I have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla for the last two years and am pleased to say that I have found it a cure for the blood. My blood was impoverished, I was quite thin and pale, and had no appetite; but as soon as I began to use Hood's Sarsaparilla I found relief. I gained in weight, and my appetite improved rapidly. I now recommend Hood's to all my friends that are suffering from impure blood and loss of appetite, as I have found it better than any other medicine I have taken." Begin to take
