ORATORY IS ONLY HEAT AT ELECTION MEETING

Audience Shivers As Candidates
Talk in Empress Avenue School.

SMITH IS HECKLED
Forced To Sit Down When Audience Refuses To Listen
Any Longer.

Inspired probably by a real stage in the auditorium of Empress Avenue school, candidates for municipal office treated a fair-sized audience to some fluent oratory at a meeting held there last night.

There were 33 speakers, not counting the hecklers, and the flow of oratory lasted from 7:30 until nearly 11, by which time the audience had dwindled to six, including the reporters. In defence of the audience it must be related that there was an entire absence of heat in the building, and even the heated remarks of some of the speakers in that connection could not modify the zero atmosphere. Jared Vining, candidate for re-election to the public utilities commission stated that whoever was responsible for the lack of heat was deserving of the severest re-ensure. "To ask an audience to sit here with absolutely no heat in the radiators on a cold winter night is a crime," he declared. Trustee B. N. Campbell of the board of education promised an investigation into the matter.

Attentive Hearing.
Despite adverse conditions, the meeting was an interesting one. Both candidates for mayor got an attentive hearing. The mayor was subjected to some heckling, but the intending heckler failed to make his voice heard distinctly, and was finally shouted down by the audience when it developed that whatever he was complaining of took place in 1922, when the mayor was not in office.

The liveliest passages of the evening were reserved for Jared Vining, who was subjected to a crossfire of questions on water rates, and especially the service charge.

He had remarked that the utilities commission was not a tax-paying body, but on the contrary helped to keep the tax rate down by turning over to the council every year a surplus from their operations. Last year the commission had a deficit of $16,000, he said, because the revenue under the new water system had not proven sufficient to meet operating expenses.

Mention of meters brought hecklers into the arena. The speaker was asked why the service charge was put, to which he answered, "We had to get the money. That's the answer. Our duty is to charge for water what it costs to produce and distribute it, and it doesn't matter whether you call it a service charge or not. You're not paying any more for your water with the service charge than you would be if the rates were raised to meet the costs."

Save Much Water.
One result from the meter system already apparent, he said, was the saving of 1,000,000 gallons a day formerly thrown away. Thousands of consumers are not using a third as much water as they formerly did, and the careful consumer is no longer helping to pay for the waste of his prodigal neighbor.

Philip Pocock, candidate for re-election to the commission, dealt chiefly with hydro, although he touched briefly upon the water problem. He was not interrupted.

When hydro first came to London there were only 2,700 homes in the city that could afford electric light, and it cost them ten cents per kilowatt hour. Now 17,500 homes have not only electric light but labor-saving appliances of all kinds at a cost of one and a half cents per kilowatt hour. Buffalo, twelve miles from Niagara, pays seven cents per kilowatt hour. No other city in Ontario gets cheaper power either for light or power purposes than London, he declared. He thought the utilities commission had done well for the citizens.

C. R. Smith, the following speaker, thought differently on the subject. The utilities commission, according to his version, was a "plutocratic affair run by men of great wealth," while the children of the workingmen are going without bread and butter in order that their parents may pay the service charge on their water supply. "They say they are the friends of the workman, but I want to tell you that they recently bought a dishing machine which will put fifty of you men out of a job," he said.

Smith Sits Down.
He went on to relate that the commission had spent thousands in the drilling of a certain well, but got not one ounce of water, but Jared Vining pointed out that the well was delivering water.

ing 350,000 gallons of water per day into the city mains. Further remarks by the speaker were unintelligible as the audience, tiring of the performance, besought him to be seated.

Board of education candidates, as usual, fared badly by having to wait until the end of the lengthy program before getting a chance to speak. Trustee Rev. R. D. Moss said it was no wonder the board had refused to pay their share of the cost of the meetings, since they never had a share in the meetings. An abominable system, he termed it. Other board of education candidates who spoke briefly included Mrs. F. J. Greenaway, Mrs. John Rose, George F. Copeland, Gordon H. Tennant and F. H. Curran.

The nurses' home bylaw was ably presented by Dr. C. C. Clegg of Victoria hospital, and Miss McIntosh made an effective plea for the bylaw authorizing extensions to Victoria home and Aged People's home.

Bottrill Speaks.
Ald. Bottrill, speaking in his own behalf for the first time in this campaign, received an ovation when he referred to the "Ridout street bridge which I closed." "She should be closed, and closed tight," he added when the applause subsided.

Other aldermanic candidates, who spoke included Ald. John Ashton, J. A. E. Braden, Ald. Carswell, Ald. Tom Clift, John A. Croden, Ald. Paul Doig, Dickson F. Glass, Frank Gray, George Hayman, Ald. F. B. Kilbourne, W. J. Kilpatrick, Ald. Linnell, W. C. Morrison, W. L. Sandrett, Ald. Ed. Smith, Tom Terry, F. J. Timbrell, Allan Towle, Harry R. K. Tozer were an efficient chairman at the meeting.

Bull Pays Price of Popularity

King of the Faires From Wales' Ranch Sells For $1,050.

Associated Press Dispatch.
Chicago, Dec. 3.—Champion short-horn bull owned by H. R. H. the Prince of Wales, and also grand champion at the Royal Winter show in Toronto this year, is now the property of Frank C. Baker, Kansas City, Mo. This famous bull, King of the Faires, was sold for the astonishingly low price of $1,050 at the auction sale of short-horn cattle at the exposition this afternoon.

The announcement that King of the Faires was to be sold this afternoon attracted a capacity crowd to the sales building. The price of popularity was the principal cause for the low price, for since its arrival from Toronto last week thousands have inspected the animal, causing it to stand up continuously, and therefore, when it entered the sales ring today the bull limped and showed every sign of exhaustion.

Odor of Skunk Lives After Him

Skin Proves Too Much For Mail Car and Forest Postoffice.

Special To The Advertiser by Staff Correspondent.

Forest, Dec. 3.—A parcel containing a skunk's skin was recently thrown off a mail car here because the mail clerks are not issued with gas masks and could not stand the high pressure odor. It was innocently brought from the depot platform with the mail bags to the postoffice. The warmth of the postoffice soon brought out all the perfumes of Araby and the staff vacated the place until the parcel was located and taken out. It was mailed back to the sending office next day.
