

Battle of Life—"Peace"—and, "More than a year in Heaven." Three of these are from the pen of Mrs. Buchanan, of Clairmont Park. One of them, viz: "The Crown Jewel, or the Miser," appeared sometime ago in the pages of the Record, and was universally admired. The whole series will, we doubt not, be read by many with deep interest. There is a simple pathos about some of the narratives, such as the "Martyr Lassie," and "More than a Year in Heaven," which will find its way to young hearts, and touch older ones. To our readers, both old and young, we heartily recommend it.

Ministers of eminent gifts and stations should make themselves familiar with their inferiors, and know their state and character.

Religion obliges men not to live above what they have, or spend more than God gives them.

The way to increase what we have, is to use it. It is not hoarding the talents, but trading with them that doubles them.

We are never straitened in God—in his power and bounty, and the riches of His grace. All our straitness is in ourselves. It is our faith that fails, not His promise.

Let those, whom God has blessed with plenty, use it for his glory, and under the direction of His word.

Those, who receive courtesies, should study to return them.

When God calls away our dearest relations by death, it becomes us quietly to say, "It is well, both with us and them." It is well, for all is well that God does. All is well with them, if gone to heaven; and all is well with us, if by the affliction we are furthered in our way thither.
