[This part of the Index is chiefly designed for the Chronicle; and contains, not only the names of persons, but of places, also, where the principal events, recorded in this volume, have happened. The reader, by attending to the references, will have a continued history of each country, for the period which the volume comprizes; an advantage wanting in every other publication of this kind.—Many names, from the other departments of the Magazine, have been thrown in here; where they were judged more likely to lead to the several pieces, than the titles of the pieces themselves; though these, in their proper places, have never been omitted.]
