

Business of the House

Some hon. Members: Ten o'clock.

Mr. Howard: Unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, what is happening is that these people are becoming so blinded by statistics and percentages, hundreds of thousands of dollars and the amount of money in the unemployment insurance fund, that they are forgetting entirely that people are involved; that workmen have been out of jobs year after year because of the fumbling, bumbling and ineptness of this particular government. Almost a year ago now the government made a most stupid blunder in attempting to balance the budget because it was gambling with people's welfare, people's lives, and it did not care so long as what came out was politically advantageous.

May I call it ten o'clock, Mr. Speaker?

BUSINESS OF THE HOUSE

Mr. Chevrier: I presume the house will be dealing with this motion tomorrow. Does the house leader want to indicate what the business will be on Wednesday?

Mr. Churchill: We will carry on this debate tomorrow, Mr. Speaker.

At ten o'clock the house adjourned, without question put, pursuant to standing order.
