

times. "We must make sure that we are in line not only with our allies but with our great dominions overseas. We have to face problems, political, racial and geographical, of surpassing intricacy.

"There is a temptation to use vague language and broad generalities, and slide over awkward questions. But of what use has been our inter-allied conferences and the meetings of the imperial cabinet if there has been no co-ordination of our aims?"

Some of the earlier versions of the allied aims are obsolete, according to the letter. The governing document for a long time was the allies' note of January 10, 1917, but Russia had since fallen out.

"The secret treaties the disclosure of which so seriously exercised the public mind in this country," he continues, "may, I assume, be regarded as liable to revision in many important particulars."

Premier's Speech

Lord Lansdowne refers to the premier's speech of January 5 as being regarded as the most authoritative recital of the allies' war aims. "The length and elaborate," he says, "is at some points, perhaps, inevitably wanting in precision. The people are asking whether it still holds the field, whether all the demands comprised in it are in the same plane and whether no conversation can be commenced until the central powers have signified their acceptance of the whole of them."

Declaring that there had been other striking statements, he writes:

"The most remarkable of these is President Wilson's fourth of July speech—remarkable both for what it contains and what it omits. It derives additional importance from the fact that our own prime minister immediately and wholeheartedly adopted it."

"It is a picture drawn by a great master of the golden age to which we are bidden to look forward. It does not seem, however, to provide those who are in search of a basis for preliminary negotiations with the kind of groundwork after which they are striving."

Nobly-Worded Picture

"If Germany should intimate her readiness to conform to President Wilson's standards a long advance would have been made in the right direction. The speech is, however, not an outline of peace terms, but a very nobly-worded description of 'the things for which the associated people of the world are fighting.'"

Even if Germany were ready to combine in the setting up of a tribunal for peace and justice and it could be assumed that her power for disturbing the peace would be reduced to impotence, he continues: "We should still find ourselves at the beginning and not at the end of an extremely complicated negotiation; we would still be without reasonable adjustment of the main terms of peace necessary, according to Mr. Balfour, for international stability."

"When, therefore, the prime minister announces that he has accepted President Wilson's conditions, he surely overstates his case. Nor does he greatly advance our position by intimating that the benefit of those Germans who are continually warned that we are bent upon their utter destruction, the god of brute force must this time and forever be broken and burnt in its own furnace."

Quoting General Smuts' Glasgow speech lengthily, Lord Lansdowne comments: "Humbler persons have been held up to execration for using language of this kind. General Smuts has given the coup de grace to the knockout blow and points the way to a true conception of that victory which all of us regard as indispensable, a victory aiming not only at momentary security in the field, but permanent security under which President Wilson's ideals can eventually be realized."

"The test of its completeness will be found in the enemy's readiness to throw aside the doctrines of extreme militarism and accept the terms which he would not have been allowed to look at when he set out upon his desperate enterprise."

Lansdowne says that he is not prepared to affirm that the stage has been reached where there is a prospect of a preliminary agreement on the essential points of profitable considerations.

"But," he adds, "there are abundant indications that such occasions may present themselves in the near future. Let us be prepared to meet them, and, in a reasonable spirit, let us give our adversaries the chance of showing whether their overtures are sincere or not."

On the argument that the moment in which the allies are achieving glorious successes in the field is not the moment for hinting at peace, he says: "In the face of the world-wide calamities the war has brought, no moment can be inopportune for considering reasonable proposals. If one moment is more opportune than another, it is the moment when events have shown that whatever has been the feeling that inspires it, it is not doubt of our ability to hold our own in this deadly struggle, if we are compelled to continue it."

WHISKEY AND CHICKENS FOUND IN SAME COOP

A curious case came to light last night when Detectives Mitchell and Cronin arrested Mike Zaskew, an Austrian living at 34 Niagara street, and Alex. Zyda, another Austrian of the same address, who had been charged with theft from the Canadian Express Company and a breach of the Ontario Temperance Act.

It seems that two cases of the same size and appearance, labelled coffee, which had been consigned from a Montreal tea firm, were loaded on the wagon at the same time, one for Zaskew's house and the other to go to a house on West Wellington street. The driver made a mistake and delivered both to 34 Niagara street. When the company notified the police of their loss, the detectives called at the Niagara street house and were told that the extra box had been taken away. However, when they made a search the two boxes were found concealed in a chicken coop at the rear of the house. When opened the cases were found to contain whiskey. About 18 gallons of liquor were seized.

TIME TO ENQUIRE ABOUT COAL NOW

Advice of Dealer in East End, Who Criticizes Fuel Situation.

"I have not had a car of coal in my yard since June 5 and am unable to buy any," said James C. Smith, coal and coke merchant, 863 Broadview, to a reporter for The World yesterday.

Mr. Smith, who has four brothers in the Canadian forces overseas, is very indignant at the manner in which, he affirms, the coal situation is handled in the city. "A fuel control is a joke," he declares. Mr. Smith, who added that the large coal firms in the district are receiving supplies of fuel regularly, and by some means to squeeze out the little dealers.

"We are not living in Germany, but in Canada, and should receive British justice," said Mr. Smith. He added that the people in the east end would be well advised to get together and investigate the coal situation for themselves, and find out in time where their winter's supply of coal can be secured and what they have much suffering in the cold weather.

"I know of one householder in the district who has had 125 tons of coal delivered into his cellar during the past few months, being 25 tons in excess of the quantity he received last year," said Mr. Smith.

Danforth

WORK IS ADVANCING ON VIADUCT AND BRIDGES

The double tracks on the Don viaduct are all laid and over one-half have been concreted in and leveled for the blocks. The remainder toward Rosedale creek will be concreted in this week. The south track on the bridge has been laid and blocked from the Danforth end about 100 yards west. No blocks have yet been put down between the bridge and the track. All the south track and the devil-strip could be blocked right across in less than a week, and this would let vehicles use the bridge without greatly interfering with the rest of the work.

The tracks on the Rosedale viaduct have been extended easterly along Castle Frank road toward the Don viaduct for a third of the distance, and ought to be joined up with the long bridge in a couple of days more.

Ties and rails are being piled along the new roadway from the west end of the Rosedale bridge (Parliament street) to Sherbourne, and the surface brought up to level. The steel girders to carry the tracks over the river are not yet on the ground.

On the big bridge the foundation stands to carry the power wires are ready for the iron poles. These poles are on the work waiting erection. These foundations are also finished on the Castle Frank road between the bridges. The smaller bridge was completely finished last fall.

In an effort to "catch on" an ice wagon on Gothic avenue yesterday afternoon, six-year-old George Plummer, 113 Gothic avenue, ran in front of a motor car driven by A. C. Fowler, 330 Rhode island avenue, Buffalo, and was knocked down.

Fowler took the child to Dr. W. J. McCormick's office at the High Park Sanitarium, where he was found not to be seriously injured, and was taken home.

Earls Court

BLAME HIGH CURB FOR FATAL ACCIDENT

The high curb on St. Clair avenue is said to have been the cause of the accident on Monday evening by which Mrs. Ellen Bursey and Mrs. E. R. Mores lost their lives when a one-ton auto truck struck them. The curbing has been considered too high for safety for some time past, and representations have been made from time to time to city hall without effect.

Had the curbing been more on a level with the roadway, the force of the impact on the sidewalk would have been reduced, and the chances are that the accident would not have proved fatal.

All the stores will close during the funeral services for the victims of this tragedy. The interment will be in Prospect cemetery. The Oakwood Lodge of Oddfellows, of which Fred Bursey is a member, has sent a beautiful wreath, with sincere sympathy, and the British Imperial Association has also arranged to send a wreath as one from the people of Earls Court.

Brampton

BRAMPTON WILL HAVE AN OLD-TIME CARNIVAL

Miss Switzer, in the employ of the Canadian Express, received word this week that her brother, Norman Switzer, who enlisted in the Canadian army and went to France last summer with the 52nd Battery, had been burned on the face and arms with gas, but had been freed on duty.

There will be a big gathering of Brampton old-timers on Monday next when the different organizations of the town stage the big carnival on behalf of the Red Cross fund. From the time the big parade starts at 1 o'clock until the night is over at midnight, there will not be an idle minute. The people who used to live here in the days when the same kind of thing occurred, are glad of a chance to show the younger generation how things used to be done in "the good old days."

One hundred and thirty-two motors parked in a large hall at the old time evening speaks well for the popularity of the town as a place to shop in one evening. The club engaged were: P. Pidgeon, W. Blain, J. O'Brien, Fred Miller and W. C. Miller. Rev. E. C. Miller, of Fairbank, officiated.

This leaves the other evening a motion to hold the annual event on Dominion day was very favorably considered, and may be adopted.
