The opening of the battle of Pinsk marks the second effort of the Russians after the long period of quiet which followed the revolution. The point selected for this attack is about 175 miles north of the sector in East Galicia along which the Russians made their first onslaught resulting in the capture of about 18,000 men in two days. Pinsk is at the mid-dle of the Russo-Galician battle line. There has been no heavy fighting in this region since the conclusion of the great Austro-German drive which began in the spring of 1915. During the summer the Russians were driven out Western Galicia, Poland, and most of the Baltic provinces.
