MINT PATTER

Morrisette said yesterday "I have nothing to conceal—not even a baseball bat." He didn't.

O'Hearne was working, too, but the hits show that the umps didn't have anything to do with it. Most of the fans think now that Morrisette will spend the rest of his days posing for dental ads.

You can take it either way— that it's the teeth or above 'em. It works either way and they're both four trips to the plate, showing that the amateur phenom is getting Those silk shirts the Beavers got for getting into the first division must be worn to ribbons by now.

Brantford, with the chances of selling at least three players this year, will make a good season of it. London is about the only place where the gate alone will make returns look like the mint issue. A Cub scout looked over Estelle yesterday in one of his best cames.

If President Maines watched the game yesterday he must have had a warm tingling sensation in the vicinity of the ears.

It's possible that he takes the assault as one for the civil courts to look after. That's the principle that lets a mad dog bite everybody while they wait for a policeman. Anyhow, if Morrisette was parading in his true colors when he donned a colored bathrobe any number of London fans are willing they can guess the color on two guesses.

The detectives who were on the trail afterwards could find no small scales, so it is deducted that the Frenchman didn't weigh his bat.

A lot's been deducted from the little affair—but nothing from Morrisonals.

Mr. Jack Kearns is certainly playing a deep game, and his trail is by no means easy to follow. It may be that he has no use for Carpentier, since reports are now flashing around and ocross the States, asserting that Georges the Great ran away, "wailing that he had a contract with Cochran of London." Now, Kearns and Dempsey have received Mr. Cochran's offer of £50,000 for their end of a Carpentier-Dempsey purse. They must be perfectly well aware that this is a far larger sum than they could hope to get from any American promoter, yet they still insist on their right to say when and where they will meet the Frenchman, if ever.

There is no suggestion that Dempsey
