Declares He Did Not Advise or Assist Mrs. Johnson in Her Attempts to Kill Husband—Says He Advised Her Against It

Hopewell Cape, N. B., April 16—The tenth day's proceedings in connection with the Albert poisoning case concluded this evening with the end a considerable way off. All hope of getting through by Saturday night has been abandoned, it being likely Monday night or possibly Tuesday before the finish is reached.

The case for the crown was concluded at noon today and the first witness called by the defence was the prisoner Downing himself, whose direct examination was finished at 5.30, his cross-examination being still in progress when court adjourned.

Coming down to the question of the alleged poisoning, the accused said he knew nothing about the heart medicine until Mrs. Johnson said she had got poison in Moncton and had administered it on three different times, twice in biscuit and once in butter milk. The accused said he was going to tell on her, and asked her what she wanted to get rid of her husband for.

So far as the idea of showing Johnson off the wharf, as Mrs. Johnson said he had suggested, the accused said he had never heard of it until he heard it in court.

In connection with the use of Paris green, the accused said he never advised it, but on the contrary, after she had told him she was going to use it, he advised her not to do so. He said he told Mrs. Johnson that when she got Johnson killed he had her letters and would hand them over, and she would be punished. Mrs. Johnson had expressed herself very strongly that she did not want to live with her husband.

Accused also said he heard Mrs. Johnson say she was going to give "Charlie" (meaning her husband) ground glass, but the witness denied ever advising or suggesting it. She had told him afterwards that she had used it.

When cross-examined by Mr. Mullin,

PICTORIAL REVIEW FOR MAY

The cover design is a charming baby subject by Jessie Pease Gutmann. Under the head of poetry appears "The Song of the Vase," by Anna Bird Stewart. Then comes the editorial "What Clean-Up Day Means to Your Town," a plea for a better and more beautiful community. A new serial by Cora Harris entitled "The Co-Chitlens," begins this month with illustrations by Hanson Booth. Under short stories appear "Cupid and the Car," by Emerson Hough, illustrations by Arthur William Brown; "The Prune-Stone Dope," by Gertrude Brooke Hamilton, illustrations by Walter H. Everett; "The Saving of Hiram Sessions," by Mary E. Wilkins Freeman, illustrations by J. Scott Williams; "Aunt Janie and the Moonlight," by Kelle Howard, illustrations by Jessie Gillespie; "The Latest Scout," by Marie Benton Cooke, illustrations by John Cassel.

The special articles include "The German City and the Housewife," a philosophical article by Orison Sweet Harden, and "Bolted Doors," an astounding condition of affairs prevailing in Germany that work toward one end—the protection of the housewife. "Make Your Life a Masterpiece," is a philosophical article by Orison Sweet Harden, and "Bolted Doors," is a charming fantasy of married life by Edwin Levin. Here is a partial list of the helpful life-making and household articles, "The Best Kind of House for $6,000," "Ways to Make the House Cool," "Washing-Day Helps," "Ironing-Day Helps," "Pin-Money From Fruits," etc. The fiction and embroidery pages all give the very latest modes; "Monograms for Linen and Lingerie," "Pillows for Bungalowers," "Lovelier Than Ever Are the New Lingerie Frocks," "Charming Afternoon Gowns for Early Summer Wear," "What is New in Tailored Suits and Coats," "Separate Waists and Skirts Suitable for Stout Women," "Latest Novelties in Bathing Suits," "Picturesque Empire Frocks for Evening Wear," "The New Empire Styles for Misses," "Dainty Frocks for Big and Little Sisters," "Juvenile Fashions of Distinction and Charm," "Practical and Pretty Lingerie and Kimonos," etc.

Then A Cow.
Awkward mistakes occur sometimes through falling into certain mannerisms of expression. A parson had a habit of repeating "for years and years" in the course of a sermon. He was preaching on the Prodigal Son, and spoke of him sitting down in that far-off land thinking of the home he had not seen "for years and years." This was all right, but presently he spoke of the welcome to his old home, and of the calf which his father had kept in anticipation of that happy day. "Yes," said he, dropping into his favorite cadence for the winding up of a sentence, "yes, the calf which he had kept for years and years and years!" Then somebody laughed.

College Humor
Professor (in history) — How was Alexander III. of Russia killed?
Freshman—By a bomb.
Professor—How do you account for that?
Freshman—It exploded.
