

THE EVENING TIMES-STAR, SAINT JOHN, N. B., FRIDAY, JULY 2, 1926

MANY HEARD IN TRIBUTE J.T.A. ROBINSON

Times-Star Reporter Dies
After Brave Fight Against
Ailments

HIGHLY REGARDED IN NEWSPAPER WORK

Last Illness Brief—Funeral Is
Arranged for Saturday
Afternoon

Wherever Times-Star reporters went today on their daily mission of news gathering there were heard expressions of sorrow at the death of J. T. A. Robinson, who passed away early on Thursday morning at the age of 30. He had been an active reporter for this newspaper, and while very concerned chiefly with the writing of shipping news and sporting news, had done work along many other lines. In this he had gained acquaintance and everywhere was in favor for the manner in which he went about his task, and for the address with which he met those whom it was his duty to call upon in the routine of his day.

By his colleagues he was held in high esteem for his brisqueness of manner, his love of the newspaper work, his courage under difficulties, his ability as a reporter and for his readiness always to do his share or a little more in the daily work of newspaper production. It was with regret that they heard that he had to rest in his work for months some little time ago, and with measure that they welcomed his return to his desk apparently greatly improved. He had not, however, won the battle against disease, and on last Saturday found on his going home that he would have to go under doctor's care again. That his life was near its end no one thought.

He had been a sufferer from complications of troubles and several attacks of pleurisy within recent months had so weakened him that he could not successfully repel the last re-

Newspaper Man Dies

T. ALLAN ROBINSON
Reporter of Times-Star, who passed away on Thursday.

BORN HERE IN 1895.

Thomas Allan Robinson was born in this city on Oct. 22, 1895, the son of Mrs. Hannah E. (Roe) Robinson and the late Thomas Robinson, and had been a resident of Saint John for the greater part of his life. He was educated in the local schools and was graduated from the Saint John High School. While at the High School he was active in sports. He was a member of the baseball, basketball and football teams, and had been closely identified with sports in the city long after he left High School. About six years ago Mr. Robinson joined the editorial staff of the Saint John Telegraph. For several seasons he reported the important baseball games in this city and vicinity for that newspaper and became prominent throughout Saint John baseball circles. His kindness and popularity were general, and his accounts of the games were acknowledged to be fair and well written. He knew the game from all angles, his experience on the High School team and his later close study having enabled him to judge with accuracy the most complicated and rapid plays. He had on many occasions officiated as official scorer. In football and basketball games "Hank" was also at home, and here again his school boy experience came to the aid of the newspaper man. He had a wide acquaintance, in fact with the history of sport along many lines and his memory of events and dates in this regard was remarkable. After the amalgamation of The Daily Telegraph and The Journal, Mr. Robinson became a member of the staff of The Telegraph-Journal. His news getting abilities as a reporter of general news were not less than those in the sporting department but unfortunately his health began to decline and on occasions he was granted leave of absence.

TO DAY WORK.

Some time ago Mr. Robinson began duty on The Times-Star staff, of which he continued an efficient, devoted general reporter. At various times he assisted in the sporting department and when his last illness came was acting as sport editor of The Times-Star. His chief work lately had been in ship news. There, as well, he had uniform success. He had a wide acquaintance along the harbor front and was highly thought of by the men in the shipping offices and the Customs House. During his indisposition during last spring and more recently, many inquiries as to his health had been made by friends there, but none had any idea that the end was so near.

Not even those working with him knew what a gallant battle he was waging to do his duty to the utmost, for he never complained, though it has now come to knowledge that often there was entailed much of sacrifice on his part in carrying on to the end of the day's duties.

MANY TRIBUTES HERE.

Along the lines of his daily news "beat" yesterday there were heard many tributes to his faithfulness to his task, to his facility as a news gatherer and to his readiness to make and retain friends. The Rockford challenger put aside his training long enough today to announce that next week, he will be married to Miss Elizabeth Hemmings, his home town sweetheart. Measurements of Kansas and Mandell reveal little advantage to either for the title match. Mandell has his four more inches of reach and an advantage of five inches in height. Youth is tremendously on Mandell's side. Kansas, looking back on 16 years of ring service, is 31 years old, while the title aspirant is but 23.

FAIR VALE PLAYERS ARE GETTING READY

George Dobbin Named as Manager—League to Start Next Week

A meeting, which was well attended by baseball enthusiasts, was held at the home of George Dobbin, Fair Vale, last evening. Mr. Dobbin was re-elected manager of the Fair Vale team for the season. L. A. Ellis and George Bishop were chosen to act in case of disputes, etc., and George Stubbs was the Fair Vale nominee for umpire. Practice will be held Saturday evening on the Fair Vale grounds at 7:15 o'clock, and every evening next week at the same hour. Those wishing to make the team are asked to give their names to the manager and report for practice. A meeting will be held on Monday evening with the Rothesay executive and it is hoped to get the Rothesay-Fair Vale league under way by Thursday, July 8.

NOT HOLY NAME.

To the Sports Editor of The Times-Star:—I want to state, on behalf of the St. Peter's Holy Name Society, that the baseball team bearing the name St. Peter's, is absolutely in no way connected with our society. It is a team of the Independent Amateur Baseball League, which played at the St. Peter's ball park on July 1. These games were witnessed by hundreds who appreciate clean, healthy sport, and who have long felt the need of good baseball in Saint John. I feel I am voicing the sentiments of the vast throng present at these games when I congratulate the management of St. Peter's ball park for organizing this league, and for throwing open to the public its beautiful ball park, to who at any time, bring recreation and to which the children

Late Sport News

MANDELL TO MARRY SOON AFTER BOUT

Challenger of Rocky Kansas Announces Engagement; Favored for Victory

CHICAGO, Ill., July 2.—The clang of the ringing gong will be drowned by the musical chime of wedding bells for Sammy Mandell, soon after his championship bout here Saturday with Rocky Kansas. The Rockford challenger put aside his training long enough today to announce that next week, he will be married to Miss Elizabeth Hemmings, his home town sweetheart. Measurements of Kansas and Mandell reveal little advantage to either for the title match. Mandell has his four more inches of reach and an advantage of five inches in height. Youth is tremendously on Mandell's side. Kansas, looking back on 16 years of ring service, is 31 years old, while the title aspirant is but 23.

FAIR VALE PLAYERS ARE GETTING READY

George Dobbin Named as Manager—League to Start Next Week

A meeting, which was well attended by baseball enthusiasts, was held at the home of George Dobbin, Fair Vale, last evening. Mr. Dobbin was re-elected manager of the Fair Vale team for the season. L. A. Ellis and George Bishop were chosen to act in case of disputes, etc., and George Stubbs was the Fair Vale nominee for umpire. Practice will be held Saturday evening on the Fair Vale grounds at 7:15 o'clock, and every evening next week at the same hour. Those wishing to make the team are asked to give their names to the manager and report for practice. A meeting will be held on Monday evening with the Rothesay executive and it is hoped to get the Rothesay-Fair Vale league under way by Thursday, July 8.

NOT HOLY NAME.

To the Sports Editor of The Times-Star:—I want to state, on behalf of the St. Peter's Holy Name Society, that the baseball team bearing the name St. Peter's, is absolutely in no way connected with our society. It is a team of the Independent Amateur Baseball League, which played at the St. Peter's ball park on July 1. These games were witnessed by hundreds who appreciate clean, healthy sport, and who have long felt the need of good baseball in Saint John. I feel I am voicing the sentiments of the vast throng present at these games when I congratulate the management of St. Peter's ball park for organizing this league, and for throwing open to the public its beautiful ball park, to who at any time, bring recreation and to which the children

CHARLES COUGHLIN, Secretary.

COMMENDATION

To the Sports Editor of The Times-Star:—While perusing the columns of your valuable paper I have read with much interest the controversy referring to the Independent Amateur Baseball League, which played at the St. Peter's ball park on July 1. These games were witnessed by hundreds who appreciate clean, healthy sport, and who have long felt the need of good baseball in Saint John. I feel I am voicing the sentiments of the vast throng present at these games when I congratulate the management of St. Peter's ball park for organizing this league, and for throwing open to the public its beautiful ball park, to who at any time, bring recreation and to which the children

BLESSING OF ROME'S AUTOS SUGGESTED

ROME, July 2.—A solemn blessing of all the city's automobiles and the placing of them under the protection of a patron saint has been suggested in certain quarters here. The blessing of ships in ports and of livestock is an old custom in many Catholic countries, and it is argued that the custom should now be extended to Rome's motor cars. A Patron Saint has been suggested in the person of Saint Francesca Romana, a Roman lady of noble birth who lived in the 14th century and founded the religious order of the Oblates. It is also suggested that Saint Christopher would make a suitable Patron Saint as he is the Saint to whom Catholics may pray to avoid a violent death. In fact, in Paris and several other French cities, chauffeurs often carry a small picture of this Saint on their automobiles.

FATHER VIGILANTE, in Toronto, has been carrying out annually the ceremony of blessing automobiles on St. Christopher's day.

SALE

Wall Papers, 8c, 10c, 12c, 15c roll. Odd Borders, 3c, 4c, 5c yard. Surprise Soap, 4c. Infant's Delight, 7c. Olive Soap, 4c. 10c Bath Soap, 7c. Scrub Brushes, 5c and 10c. Sink Brushes, 3c. Cotton Hose in sand and black 25c pair. Silk Hose, 25c, 35c, 50c, 75c a pair. Grey Cotton, 15c a yard. Curtain Scrim, 12c and 15c a yard. Green Scrim Cloth 12c a yard. Table Oilcloth, 35c a yard. Alarm Clocks (special) $1.15. Large White Plates, 10c each. White and Gold Cups and Saucers, 15c. Story Books, 5c and 10c. Rubber Balls, 3c, 5c, 7c, 10c. Baby Dolls (with moving eyes and hair). Special 15c. Enamel Ware, China and Glassware at reduced prices. $5.00 Electric Iron. Special, $2.95.

ARNOLD'S

DEPARTMENT STORE
157-159 Prince Edward Street

The Best of the BEST WHEAT

Loaves of Nourishment

"Canada grows world famous wheat; yet there are different grades of it. Some are better than others. REGAL FLOUR is made from the very best quality of flour obtainable in this country."

REGAL FLOUR

Wonderful for Bread!

ASKS $7,500 FOR GIVING LUNCHEON

Press Agent Sues New York Banker Over Mountbatten Banquet

NEW YORK, July 2.—New Yorkers are chuckling over the suit for $7,500 brought by Walter Hyams, a press agent, against Felix M. Warburg, banker, not because the charges have been substantiated, but because they give a hint of what is behind some of the entertainment afforded British nobility in this country. Hyams, head of a press clipping bureau, alleges that he arranged a luncheon given in honor of Lord Louis Mountbatten and Lady Mountbatten, who are related to British royalty, to advance the social prestige and business of Mr. Warburg. Editors and newspaper owners attended the luncheon, at which Hyams acted as host, Warburg being a guest. The press agent asks a total of $7,500. He says he gave out $800 in tips, $25 for printing, $30 for photographs and $10 for automobile hire, and that Warburg agreed to pay a fee of $7,500 for "putting it over." The banker retorts that he never saw Hyams before the luncheon, which was held at the Bankers' Club, November 22, 1922.

Press Agent Sues New York Banker Over Mountbatten Banquet

NEW YORK, July 2.—New Yorkers are chuckling over the suit for $7,500 brought by Walter Hyams, a press agent, against Felix M. Warburg, banker, not because the charges have been substantiated, but because they give a hint of what is behind some of the entertainment afforded British nobility in this country. Hyams, head of a press clipping bureau, alleges that he arranged a luncheon given in honor of Lord Louis Mountbatten and Lady Mountbatten, who are related to British royalty, to advance the social prestige and business of Mr. Warburg. Editors and newspaper owners attended the luncheon, at which Hyams acted as host, Warburg being a guest. The press agent asks a total of $7,500. He says he gave out $800 in tips, $25 for printing, $30 for photographs and $10 for automobile hire, and that Warburg agreed to pay a fee of $7,500 for "putting it over." The banker retorts that he never saw Hyams before the luncheon, which was held at the Bankers' Club, November 22, 1922.

Press Agent Sues New York Banker Over Mountbatten Banquet

NEW YORK, July 2.—New Yorkers are chuckling over the suit for $7,500 brought by Walter Hyams, a press agent, against Felix M. Warburg, banker, not because the charges have been substantiated, but because they give a hint of what is behind some of the entertainment afforded British nobility in this country. Hyams, head of a press clipping bureau, alleges that he arranged a luncheon given in honor of Lord Louis Mountbatten and Lady Mountbatten, who are related to British royalty, to advance the social prestige and business of Mr. Warburg. Editors and newspaper owners attended the luncheon, at which Hyams acted as host, Warburg being a guest. The press agent asks a total of $7,500. He says he gave out $800 in tips, $25 for printing, $30 for photographs and $10 for automobile hire, and that Warburg agreed to pay a fee of $7,500 for "putting it over." The banker retorts that he never saw Hyams before the luncheon, which was held at the Bankers' Club, November 22, 1922.

Press Agent Sues New York Banker Over Mountbatten Banquet

NEW YORK, July 2.—New Yorkers are chuckling over the suit for $7,500 brought by Walter Hyams, a press agent, against Felix M. Warburg, banker, not because the charges have been substantiated, but because they give a hint of what is behind some of the entertainment afforded British nobility in this country. Hyams, head of a press clipping bureau, alleges that he arranged a luncheon given in honor of Lord Louis Mountbatten and Lady Mountbatten, who are related to British royalty, to advance the social prestige and business of Mr. Warburg. Editors and newspaper owners attended the luncheon, at which Hyams acted as host, Warburg being a guest. The press agent asks a total of $7,500. He says he gave out $800 in tips, $25 for printing, $30 for photographs and $10 for automobile hire, and that Warburg agreed to pay a fee of $7,500 for "putting it over." The banker retorts that he never saw Hyams before the luncheon, which was held at the Bankers' Club, November 22, 1922.

Press Agent Sues New York Banker Over Mountbatten Banquet

NEW YORK, July 2.—New Yorkers are chuckling over the suit for $7,500 brought by Walter Hyams, a press agent, against Felix M. Warburg, banker, not because the charges have been substantiated, but because they give a hint of what is behind some of the entertainment afforded British nobility in this country. Hyams, head of a press clipping bureau, alleges that he arranged a luncheon given in honor of Lord Louis Mountbatten and Lady Mountbatten, who are related to British royalty, to advance the social prestige and business of Mr. Warburg. Editors and newspaper owners attended the luncheon, at which Hyams acted as host, Warburg being a guest. The press agent asks a total of $7,500. He says he gave out $800 in tips, $25 for printing, $30 for photographs and $10 for automobile hire, and that Warburg agreed to pay a fee of $7,500 for "putting it over." The banker retorts that he never saw Hyams before the luncheon, which was held at the Bankers' Club, November 22, 1922.

Press Agent Sues New York Banker Over Mountbatten Banquet

NEW YORK, July 2.—New Yorkers are chuckling over the suit for $7,500 brought by Walter Hyams, a press agent, against Felix M. Warburg, banker, not because the charges have been substantiated, but because they give a hint of what is behind some of the entertainment afforded British nobility in this country. Hyams, head of a press clipping bureau, alleges that he arranged a luncheon given in honor of Lord Louis Mountbatten and Lady Mountbatten, who are related to British royalty, to advance the social prestige and business of Mr. Warburg. Editors and newspaper owners attended the luncheon, at which Hyams acted as host, Warburg being a guest. The press agent asks a total of $7,500. He says he gave out $800 in tips, $25 for printing, $30 for photographs and $10 for automobile hire, and that Warburg agreed to pay a fee of $7,500 for "putting it over." The banker retorts that he never saw Hyams before the luncheon, which was held at the Bankers' Club, November 22, 1922.

Press Agent Sues New York Banker Over Mountbatten Banquet

NEW YORK, July 2.—New Yorkers are chuckling over the suit for $7,500 brought by Walter Hyams, a press agent, against Felix M. Warburg, banker, not because the charges have been substantiated, but because they give a hint of what is behind some of the entertainment afforded British nobility in this country. Hyams, head of a press clipping bureau, alleges that he arranged a luncheon given in honor of Lord Louis Mountbatten and Lady Mountbatten, who are related to British royalty, to advance the social prestige and business of Mr. Warburg. Editors and newspaper owners attended the luncheon, at which Hyams acted as host, Warburg being a guest. The press agent asks a total of $7,500. He says he gave out $800 in tips, $25 for printing, $30 for photographs and $10 for automobile hire, and that Warburg agreed to pay a fee of $7,500 for "putting it over." The banker retorts that he never saw Hyams before the luncheon, which was held at the Bankers' Club, November 22, 1922.

Press Agent Sues New York Banker Over Mountbatten Banquet

NEW YORK, July 2.—New Yorkers are chuckling over the suit for $7,500 brought by Walter Hyams, a press agent, against Felix M. Warburg, banker, not because the charges have been substantiated, but because they give a hint of what is behind some of the entertainment afforded British nobility in this country. Hyams, head of a press clipping bureau, alleges that he arranged a luncheon given in honor of Lord Louis Mountbatten and Lady Mountbatten, who are related to British royalty, to advance the social prestige and business of Mr. Warburg. Editors and newspaper owners attended the luncheon, at which Hyams acted as host, Warburg being a guest. The press agent asks a total of $7,500. He says he gave out $800 in tips, $25 for printing, $30 for photographs and $10 for automobile hire, and that Warburg agreed to pay a fee of $7,500 for "putting it over." The banker retorts that he never saw Hyams before the luncheon, which was held at the Bankers' Club, November 22, 1922.

Press Agent Sues New York Banker Over Mountbatten Banquet

NEW YORK, July 2.—New Yorkers are chuckling over the suit for $7,500 brought by Walter Hyams, a press agent, against Felix M. Warburg, banker, not because the charges have been substantiated, but because they give a hint of what is behind some of the entertainment afforded British nobility in this country. Hyams, head of a press clipping bureau, alleges that he arranged a luncheon given in honor of Lord Louis Mountbatten and Lady Mountbatten, who are related to British royalty, to advance the social prestige and business of Mr. Warburg. Editors and newspaper owners attended the luncheon, at which Hyams acted as host, Warburg being a guest. The press agent asks a total of $7,500. He says he gave out $800 in tips, $25 for printing, $30 for photographs and $10 for automobile hire, and that Warburg agreed to pay a fee of $7,500 for "putting it over." The banker retorts that he never saw Hyams before the luncheon, which was held at the Bankers' Club, November 22, 1922.

Press Agent Sues New York Banker Over Mountbatten Banquet

NEW YORK, July 2.—New Yorkers are chuckling over the suit for $7,500 brought by Walter Hyams, a press agent, against Felix M. Warburg, banker, not because the charges have been substantiated, but because they give a hint of what is behind some of the entertainment afforded British nobility in this country. Hyams, head of a press clipping bureau, alleges that he arranged a luncheon given in honor of Lord Louis Mountbatten and Lady Mountbatten, who are related to British royalty, to advance the social prestige and business of Mr. Warburg. Editors and newspaper owners attended the luncheon, at which Hyams acted as host, Warburg being a guest. The press agent asks a total of $7,500. He says he gave out $800 in tips, $25 for printing, $30 for photographs and $10 for automobile hire, and that Warburg agreed to pay a fee of $7,500 for "putting it over." The banker retorts that he never saw Hyams before the luncheon, which was held at the Bankers' Club, November 22, 1922.

Press Agent Sues New York Banker Over Mountbatten Banquet

NEW YORK, July 2.—New Yorkers are chuckling over the suit for $7,500 brought by Walter Hyams, a press agent, against Felix M. Warburg, banker, not because the charges have been substantiated, but because they give a hint of what is behind some of the entertainment afforded British nobility in this country. Hyams, head of a press clipping bureau, alleges that he arranged a luncheon given in honor of Lord Louis Mountbatten and Lady Mountbatten, who are related to British royalty, to advance the social prestige and business of Mr. Warburg. Editors and newspaper owners attended the luncheon, at which Hyams acted as host, Warburg being a guest. The press agent asks a total of $7,500. He says he gave out $800 in tips, $25 for printing, $30 for photographs and $10 for automobile hire, and that Warburg agreed to pay a fee of $7,500 for "putting it over." The banker retorts that he never saw Hyams before the luncheon, which was held at the Bankers' Club, November 22, 1922.

Press Agent Sues New York Banker Over Mountbatten Banquet

NEW YORK, July 2.—New Yorkers are chuckling over the suit for $7,500 brought by Walter Hyams, a press agent, against Felix M. Warburg, banker, not because the charges have been substantiated, but because they give a hint of what is behind some of the entertainment afforded British nobility in this country. Hyams, head of a press clipping bureau, alleges that he arranged a luncheon given in honor of Lord Louis Mountbatten and Lady Mountbatten, who are related to British royalty, to advance the social prestige and business of Mr. Warburg. Editors and newspaper owners attended the luncheon, at which Hyams acted as host, Warburg being a guest. The press agent asks a total of $7,500. He says he gave out $800 in tips, $25 for printing, $30 for photographs and $10 for automobile hire, and that Warburg agreed to pay a fee of $7,500 for "putting it over." The banker retorts that he never saw Hyams before the luncheon, which was held at the Bankers' Club, November 22, 1922.

Press Agent Sues New York Banker Over Mountbatten Banquet

NEW YORK, July 2.—New Yorkers are chuckling over the suit for $7,500 brought by Walter Hyams, a press agent, against Felix M. Warburg, banker, not because the charges have been substantiated, but because they give a hint of what is behind some of the entertainment afforded British nobility in this country. Hyams, head of a press clipping bureau, alleges that he arranged a luncheon given in honor of Lord Louis Mountbatten and Lady Mountbatten, who are related to British royalty, to advance the social prestige and business of Mr. Warburg. Editors and newspaper owners attended the luncheon, at which Hyams acted as host, Warburg being a guest. The press agent asks a total of $7,500. He says he gave out $800 in tips, $25 for printing, $30 for photographs and $10 for automobile hire, and that Warburg agreed to pay a fee of $7,500 for "putting it over." The banker retorts that he never saw Hyams before the luncheon, which was held at the Bankers' Club, November 22, 1922.

Press Agent Sues New York Banker Over Mountbatten Banquet

NEW YORK, July 2.—New Yorkers are chuckling over the suit for $7,500 brought by Walter Hyams, a press agent, against Felix M. Warburg, banker, not because the charges have been substantiated, but because they give a hint of what is behind some of the entertainment afforded British nobility in this country. Hyams, head of a press clipping bureau, alleges that he arranged a luncheon given in honor of Lord Louis Mountbatten and Lady Mountbatten, who are related to British royalty, to advance the social prestige and business of Mr. Warburg. Editors and newspaper owners attended the luncheon, at which Hyams acted as host, Warburg being a guest. The press agent asks a total of $7,500. He says he gave out $800 in tips, $25 for printing, $30 for photographs and $10 for automobile hire, and that Warburg agreed to pay a fee of $7,500 for "putting it over." The banker retorts that he never saw Hyams before the luncheon, which was held at the Bankers' Club, November 22, 1922.

Press Agent Sues New York Banker Over Mountbatten Banquet

NEW YORK, July 2.—New Yorkers are chuckling over the suit for $7,500 brought by Walter Hyams, a press agent, against Felix M. Warburg, banker, not because the charges have been substantiated, but because they give a hint of what is behind some of the entertainment afforded British nobility in this country. Hyams, head of a press clipping bureau, alleges that he arranged a luncheon given in honor of Lord Louis Mountbatten and Lady Mountbatten, who are related to British royalty, to advance the social prestige and business of Mr. Warburg. Editors and newspaper owners attended the luncheon, at which Hyams acted as host, Warburg being a guest. The press agent asks a total of $7,500. He says he gave out $800 in tips, $25 for printing, $30 for photographs and $10 for automobile hire, and that Warburg agreed to pay a fee of $7,500 for "putting it over." The banker retorts that he never saw Hyams before the luncheon, which was held at the Bankers' Club, November 22, 1922.

Press Agent Sues New York Banker Over Mountbatten Banquet

NEW YORK, July 2.—New Yorkers are chuckling over the suit for $7,500 brought by Walter Hyams, a press agent, against Felix M. Warburg, banker, not because the charges have been substantiated, but because they give a hint of what is behind some of the entertainment afforded British nobility in this country. Hyams, head of a press clipping bureau, alleges that he arranged a luncheon given in honor of Lord Louis Mountbatten and Lady Mountbatten, who are related to British royalty, to advance the social prestige and business of Mr. Warburg. Editors and newspaper owners attended the luncheon, at which Hyams acted as host, Warburg being a guest. The press agent asks a total of $7,500. He says he gave out $800 in tips, $25 for printing, $30 for photographs and $10 for automobile hire, and that Warburg agreed to pay a fee of $7,500 for "putting it over." The banker retorts that he never saw Hyams before the luncheon, which was held at the Bankers' Club, November 22, 1922.

Press Agent Sues New York Banker Over Mountbatten Banquet

NEW YORK, July 2.—New Yorkers are chuckling over the suit for $7,500 brought by Walter Hyams, a press agent, against Felix M. Warburg, banker, not because the charges have been substantiated, but because they give a hint of what is behind some of the entertainment afforded British nobility in this country. Hyams, head of a press clipping bureau, alleges that he arranged a luncheon given in honor of Lord Louis Mountbatten and Lady Mountbatten, who are related to British royalty, to advance the social prestige and business of Mr. Warburg. Editors and newspaper owners attended the luncheon, at which Hyams acted as host, Warburg being a guest. The press agent asks a total of $7,500. He says he gave out $800 in tips, $25 for printing, $30 for photographs and $10 for automobile hire, and that Warburg agreed to pay a fee of $7,500 for "putting it over." The banker retorts that he never saw Hyams before the luncheon, which was held at the Bankers' Club, November 22, 1922.

Press Agent Sues New York Banker Over Mountbatten Banquet

NEW YORK, July 2.—New Yorkers are chuckling over the suit for $7,500 brought by Walter Hyams, a press agent, against Felix M. Warburg, banker, not because the charges have been substantiated, but because they give a hint of what is behind some of the entertainment afforded British nobility in this country. Hyams, head of a press clipping bureau, alleges that he arranged a luncheon given in honor of Lord Louis Mountbatten and Lady Mountbatten, who are related to British royalty, to advance the social prestige and business of Mr. Warburg. Editors and newspaper owners attended the luncheon, at which Hyams acted as host, Warburg being a guest. The press agent asks a total of $7,500. He says he gave out $800 in tips, $25 for printing, $30 for photographs and $10 for automobile hire, and that Warburg agreed to pay a fee of $7,500 for "putting it over." The banker retorts that he never saw Hyams before the luncheon, which was held at the Bankers' Club, November 22, 1922.

Press Agent Sues New York Banker Over Mountbatten Banquet

NEW YORK, July 2.—New Yorkers are chuckling over the suit for $7,500 brought by Walter Hyams, a press agent, against Felix M. Warburg, banker, not because the charges have been substantiated, but because they give a hint of what is behind some of the entertainment afforded British nobility in this country. Hyams, head of a press clipping bureau, alleges that he arranged a luncheon given in honor of Lord Louis Mountbatten and Lady Mountbatten, who are related to British royalty, to advance the social prestige and business of Mr. Warburg. Editors and newspaper owners attended the luncheon, at which Hyams acted as host, Warburg being a guest. The press agent asks a total of $7,500. He says he gave out $800 in tips, $25 for printing, $30 for photographs and $10 for automobile hire, and that Warburg agreed to pay a fee of $7,500 for "putting it over." The banker retorts that he never saw Hyams before the luncheon, which was held at the Bankers' Club, November 22, 1922.

Press Agent Sues New York Banker Over Mountbatten Banquet

NEW YORK, July 2.—New Yorkers are chuckling over the suit for $7,500 brought by Walter Hyams, a press agent, against Felix M. Warburg, banker, not because the charges have been substantiated, but because they give a hint of what is behind some of the entertainment afforded British nobility in this country. Hyams, head of a press clipping bureau, alleges that he arranged a luncheon given in honor of Lord Louis Mountbatten and Lady Mountbatten, who are related to British royalty, to advance the social prestige and business of Mr. Warburg. Editors and newspaper owners attended the luncheon, at which Hyams acted as host, Warburg being a guest. The press agent asks a total of $7,500. He says he gave out $800 in tips, $25 for printing, $30 for photographs and $10 for automobile hire, and that Warburg agreed to pay a fee of $7,500 for "putting it over." The banker retorts that he never saw Hyams before the luncheon, which was held at the Bankers' Club, November 22, 1922.

Press Agent Sues New York Banker Over Mountbatten Banquet

NEW YORK, July 2.—New Yorkers are chuckling over the suit for $7,500 brought by Walter Hyams, a press agent, against Felix M. Warburg, banker, not because the charges have been substantiated, but because they give a hint of what is behind some of the entertainment afforded British nobility in this country. Hyams, head of a press clipping bureau, alleges that he arranged a luncheon given in honor of Lord Louis Mountbatten and Lady Mountbatten, who are related to British royalty, to advance the social prestige and business of Mr. Warburg. Editors and newspaper owners attended the luncheon, at which Hyams acted as host, Warburg being a guest. The press agent asks a total of $7,500. He says he gave out $800 in tips, $25 for printing, $30 for photographs and $10 for automobile hire, and that Warburg agreed to pay a fee of $7,500 for "putting it over." The banker retorts that he never saw Hyams before the luncheon, which was held at the Bankers' Club, November 22, 1922.

Press Agent Sues New York Banker Over Mountbatten Banquet

NEW YORK, July 2.—New Yorkers are chuckling over the suit for $7,500 brought by Walter Hyams, a press agent, against Felix M. Warburg, banker, not because the charges have been substantiated, but because they give a hint of what is behind some of the entertainment afforded British nobility in this country. Hyams, head of a press clipping bureau, alleges that he arranged a luncheon given in honor of Lord Louis Mountbatten and Lady Mountbatten, who are related to British royalty, to advance the social prestige and business of Mr. Warburg. Editors and newspaper owners attended the luncheon, at which Hyams acted as host, Warburg being a guest. The press agent asks a total of $7,500. He says he gave out $800 in tips, $25 for printing, $30 for photographs and $10 for automobile hire, and that Warburg agreed to pay a fee of $7,500 for "putting it over." The banker retorts that he never saw Hyams before the luncheon, which was held at the Bankers' Club, November 22, 1922.

Press Agent Sues New York Banker Over Mountbatten Banquet

NEW YORK, July 2.—New Yorkers are chuckling over the suit for $7,500 brought by Walter Hyams, a press agent, against Felix M. Warburg, banker, not because the charges have been substantiated, but because they give a hint of what is behind some of the entertainment afforded British nobility in this country. Hyams, head of a press clipping bureau, alleges that he arranged a luncheon given in honor of Lord Louis Mountbatten and Lady Mountbatten, who are related to British royalty, to advance the social prestige and business of Mr. Warburg. Editors and newspaper owners attended the luncheon, at which Hyams acted as host, Warburg being a guest. The press agent asks a total of $7,500. He says he gave out $800 in tips, $25 for printing, $30 for photographs and $10 for automobile hire, and that Warburg agreed to pay a fee of $7,500 for "putting it over." The banker retorts that he never saw Hyams before the luncheon, which was held at the Bankers' Club, November 22, 1922.