Advocate Another Match.

(New York Times.) It seems that another match will be necessary between Gene Tunney and Harry Greb to settle satisfactorily the question of supremacy between the two light-heavyweights. Tunney must beat Greb to the complete satisfaction of everybody or Greb must trounce Tunney in an equally decisive manner before either can lay undisputed claim to the championship. At this time Tunney is the holder of a rather empty title as a result of last Friday night's bout. The logical thing to do, then, would be to match the boxers again and let the question of supremacy between them be settled once and for all.
