THE publisher of the Nova-Scotia Almanac, has been induced, from several considerations, to put out the present No. in a more condensed form than those hitherto published; and as the price is placed in accordance with the diminished number of pages, he trusts the change will be favourably received by his numerous patrons.

The number now presented to the public contains the usual astronomical calculations—which have been carefully prepared for nautical and general purposes; lists of names connected with the principal public offices; useful, entertaining, and miscellaneous readings; Interest, Sterling and Dollar Tables; together with a continuation of the Chronological Summary, and other information suited to the pages of an Almanac. The publisher confidently anticipates that in this number the deficiency in size will be amply compensated for in the reduction of price, and the general quality of its contents.
