Twenty Thousand Dellar White, and J. K. Flemming M. P. P., of Carleton County.

GAGETOWN, Sept. 25.—At the lar that the bridge investigation cost Hetherington were filed with Sheriff Reid. The court house was thronged with people, while many were unable to get standing room inside. After the usual proceedings, came speeches from members of the local government, Mr. Hazen, the leader of the opposition, and Mr. Flemming, the opposition member for Carleton county. There were six speakers in all. It was a great day for the opposition party. The speakers on that side were accorded by far the better reception, and as they scored point after point till the court house fairly shook.

At 2 o'clock Sheriff Reid said he had received two nominations, and a poll having been demanded, he would grant the same. After announcing the various polling places, he adjourned his court till October 6th, and left the court room.

John R. Dunn moved that Harry W. Woods of Welsford be chosen to preside over the meeting. The motion passed and Mr. Woods on taking the chair, returned thanks for the honor done him. He said the programme handed to him contained the names of six speakers, so that the gathering could depend upon a rich

Mr. Farris did not deny having got $100 additional ses-sional indemnity, but it was in com-mon with all the members. The circular said Mr. White was to get $20,000 for consolidating the statutes. The revision of the laws was necessary, as no one could tell what they really were at the present time. They were revised years ago and the cost then was $18,000. The insane mense crowd cheered and applauded could as well be kept in the parishes as n the asylum, which was becoming a dumping ground for such people. It was charged in the circular that $295,-000 went to pets of the government in connection with the construction of bridges. This he denied. The bridges, he said, were let out at public tender. The government were determined to keep down the expense of public printing. The game wardens and fish wardens were entitled to all they got. With reference to the cost of school books, Mr. Farris said the farmers sent their children to school from the time they were six years old till they reached the age of thirteen. In the city, children went to school from the age of six to 21 years, so that if the province supplied the school books the farmers would have to pay for books for the children of the rich people.

Mr. Farris contended that the roads of the county were in good condition, a remark which brought a broad grin to the countenance of almost everybody present. The bridges, he held, were in first class shape, and again the smile appeared. He said he had got more for the county since he had been in the legislature than Queens ever got before. He asked the electors if it these monies. In Queens county, Mr. was not better to send him back than Farris' pets got it. Was it proper to elect an opposition man. CATARRH.

A case of Catarrh of Twelve Years' Standing Permanently Cured

by Catarrhozone.

Miss Lizzle Sanford of 353 N. Market street, Chicago, Ili, whites: "I have been a constant sufferer from catarrh for 12 years and was much bothered by droppings in the throat and severe headache. I used a great number of Catarrh snuffs and powdra, but received no benefit from them, some being worse than useless. A trial size of Catarrhozone helped me more than anything else I ever tried, and I wish to say it is the best remedy I ever used. It has cured me, and I shall recommend it at every opportunity to my friends."

It cures you while you breathe and cannot fall to reach the seat of the disease; it goes wherever air can go, and no matter, how deep-wated the disease may be in the liungs or bronchlai tubes it always succumbs to the use of Catarrhozone.

Singers, and public speakers universally use Catarrhozone for the alleviation of sore threat and hacking coughs, and it has saved thousands of precious lives from consamption. What it has done for others it will do for you. Don't delay longer. Catarrh is such a gradual thing—so painless at first, but so cruelly relentless, that at the end of years we awaken to its horrors. plause.) At the last election Mr. Emmerson appealed to the people on his oil policy. At that time Mr. Farris

was almost able to see the pipes running through Queens county. The government did not have an oil policy, but they placed the oil under the mining law, which deprived the farmers, the owners of the land, from participating in the benefits arising from its discovery and development. The whole oil business would pass into the hands of a company with which Mr. Emmerson and Senator King were connected. What right had the government to take away from the farmers what was under their farms. In the dominion we had the Drummond County railway steal, and in the province the bridge steal. The people used to have the right to revise the voters list, or, rather, the municipal councils did it for them. But the local government took that right away and insisted upon the privilege of appointing one of the rewisors. The councils used to expend the bye road monies through the commissioners, but the government now handed over to their own friends run on lists prepared by R. T. Baber of Queens county. In the parish of Johnston nine names were left off. The right to revise was taken from the judge and given to the sheriff, who, after calling a court, failed to hold it. (Applause.) They were taking the old lists and depriving liberal conservatives of the right to vote. After consulting his watch, Mr. Hetherington said he regretted to find that the hour allotted to him was fast coming to an end. He could not address the people as fully as he had desired. Mr. Farris was afraid to meet the county full of whiskey and gold for use in defeating him. One man had been offered $25 to stay away from the polls. Taking up the school book question, Mr. Hetherington said Mr. Farris was in error when he contended that one text book was sufficient for a whole lot of children. There were in the province, according to were taken from the same records and the expenditure for new books mentioned in the circular was well within the mark. He took up the travelling expenses of the members of the government, which, he said, were too high. it was because he was afraid to face the government. The inception of the not to the local government, but to the efforts of the late liberal conservative government at Ottawa. (Applause.) They sent men about instructing the farmers, and the result of the work was apparent on every hand. Wheat production had increased because the price of wheat had gone up. Mr. Farris was afraid of free school books and so was Mr. White. Would it not be better to expend the $20,000 it was proposed to give Mr. White for the furnishing of school books? It was said that new school books would be required only as the old ones were used up. This was not true. Mr. Hetherington here read a letter from the board of education office to a teacher stating that the new books would be introduced at the mean very little in the way of a tax upon the people. Mr. Farris made his first appearance on the floors of the house last session. Before that he bould only be found upon the voting list. His speech was for the benefit of two of Queens county's farmers, Messrs. Farris and Carpenter, and by it they got $100 additional indemnity (Applause.) The total amount involved by this vote was $4,500. Mr. Hazen, the leader of the opposition, said that if he was returned to power he would reduce the executive to three, which would mean a great saving. At the last election, Dr. Stockton, then leader of the opposition, said he would favor a bonus for pork packing establishments. Mr. Emmerson was not going to be outdone, so he made a similar offer. Nothing has since been heard of the pork packing business. Mr. Hetherington favored such a bonus, and if elected would vote for it. He would vote to pay but one price for bridges. (Applause.) He would endeavor to leave it with the by-road commissioners appointed by the municipal councils to expend the moneys granted for that purpose. Mr. Farris claimed that the roads were in good condition. Mr. Hetherington invited him to have a drive over some of them and undertook to convince Mr. Farris by the experience that he did not know what he was talking about. (Applause.) Mr. Farris promised the people wharves. Had they got them? Where wharves were needed he declined to build them, because the people resident in those particular localities were opposed to him. Expenditures on the roads were promised to get votes, but the money had not come yet. Mr. Farris asked the people to forget that their liberties had been torn from them by this government. (Applause.) He asked them to forget that many of them were deprived of the right to vote. (Applaum) If Mr. Farris were elected there would go up a shout of joy from every femian centre, from every Boer camp, and from every place where the influence of Laurier and Tarte was felt. The dominion government having failed in their efforts to prevent the sending of troops to South Africa, tried to starve them to death with the emergency rations sent out. Mr. Farris had done much to demoralize Queens county. At the last election friends of Mr. Farris appealed to the people for votes for him because he was a Baptist and then ran open saloons in the county. Queens county had gained for itself an unenviable reputation. It had the name of having elected a minister who could not get a seat elsewhere. most ever since the time that the late John Farris represented county it had been a matter of deals. The late Mr. Farris called upon the people to elect Mr. King and they did so. Then Mr. King introduced Mr. Catholic in this government. The old ing to deprive the majority of their lature. Mr. Hetherington called upon the people of Queens, the sons of the loyalists who gave up everything for the sake of the old flag, to vote for him, not because of what he was, but on principle. Mr. Farris was a supporter of upon the dismemberment of the empire. The speaker referred to the speech of W. F. Todd, M. P. P., in which he expressed the hope that Cantion, and to the utterances of the French papers looking forward to the the banks of the St. Lawrence. The people should condemn such utterances. (Applause.) Mr. Hetherington said, depending upon the generosity of the people, he appealed to them to elect him. He was a poor man, but he thanked God that, under the British flag, a poor man stood upon the same plane as the rich man. A vote for him meant a vote for the supremacy of the party which had used every effort for the unity of the empire. He trusted that all liberal conservatives and independent liberals would go to the polls and cast their ballots for British institutions and fair play by voting for the liberal conservative candidate. (Great applause and cheers.) PREMIER TWEEDIE was the next speaker. He said the local government had nothing to do with many of the matters mentioned by the preceding speaker. All Canadians were loyal. He regretted that the religious question had been raised. The history of the local government was that from time to time cries had been raised against them. But when the elections came round the people returned the government to power. The government, he maintained, was an honest government. The charges made against them had never been proven. They had been able to effect loans on better terms than any other province. The bridge charges had entirely failed, and Mr. Hazen seemed satisfied with the enquiry. Mr. Hazen did not prove what he wanted to. A voice-"The committee shut him

Mr. Tweedie made a rather full statement with regard to the evidence given and drew certain deductions therefrom. The opposition were in the fight on the merits, or rather the demerits of the local government. (Apestablishment of a French republic on plause.) Mr. Tweedie boasted that the government had been returned to power again and again, but he forgot to tell the people that they were defeated at the polls in 1890. In that election Mr. Tweedie and his colleagues were elected to oppose Mr. Blair and his government, but Mr. Blair gave Mr. Tweedie a portfolio and he and his colleagues voted with the government instead of opposing them as they were elected to do. In 1899 the opposition party polled 47 per cent of the votes, which was a good showing. Had it not been for the influence of the dominion government they would have secured a majority. So unpopular had the government become that Carleton county at a by-election elected an opponent to them. Mr. Hetherington was a capable and competent man to represent the people of Queens. It is said he was once a patent medicine advertising man. The local government made the late Hon. J. I. Fellows, a man who was in that business, a member of the legislative council. An Ontario constituency recently elected the proprietor of a patent medicine establishment to parliament. Mr. Tweedie was a bold man to say that he (Hazen ) was satisfied with the inquiry into the bridge charges. Hazen then went fully into this matter, showing that evidence he wished to put in was shut out, and everything done to burke the inquiry. He contrasted the cost of bridges built in New Brunswick with bridges built in Nova Scotia, which showed that higher prices were paid here. The consolidation of the statutes was discussed by the leader of the opposition at great length. Mr. Blair did not consider it recessary in 1896. It was done in order to give Mr. Emmerson the office of attorney general, from which it was easier to slip up to the bench. Mr. Tweedie had no right to take credit for effecting a loan at a low rate when money was easy. Any man could have done that. Mr. Hazen discussed the increase in the debt and in closing called upon the electors to strengthen his hands by returning Mr. Hethering-

TOO MUCH SAIL.

A somewhat cantankerous old farmer, who lived in a small village in Shropshire, took to himself a young wife. After the union, however, the parties did not seem to agree as well as might have been expected. One day after an altercation, in which the wife had the worst of it, the vicar of the parish, happening to meet the old man, rebuked him for his harshness, reminding him that the wife was "the weaker vessel." "Well, sir," was the dogged rejoin-
