On Saturday aftermoon people made use of the very delightful weather by going to various drives and excursions. One of the pleasantest though the smallest of these was a snow shoe tramp, given by the Missee Kenny; starting early in the aftermoon the party had a good tramp, and returned to Thorn-vale to as:

the party had a good tramp, and returned to Thorn-vale to tea. On Saturday evening the poker party appeared to have the field. Theard of no less than five, of which two were quite large gatherings, and three were composed of a mixed company, of gentlemen and ladies. If card playing is the vice of the end of a centary, (and any one taking the trouble to look back and consult the intimate history of the fin de siece days of the sixteen and seventeen hundred may form their own opinion pretty quickly) then Halfar is well in the fashion. On Monday evening there was a small driving party, given I think by Sir John Ross, the guests returning to Bellevue House to supper. These little drives and suppers are a capital institution, they are nether long nor hate, and are generally vary jolly. The R. A. and R. E. mess was the scene of the largest supper party given after a drive the winter.

scene of the largest supper party structures this winter. The crop of upsets has by the way, gone off very little during the week; two ot the latest victims were Mr. M. R. Mr. Smith Gardner, whom I spoke of last week as being seriously ill, died on Taeaday evening, after an illness of but a little more than a lorninght. The greatest sympathy is felt for the family. Mr. Gardner was the second son, well hnown, and a general favorite in society. The funeral took place on Sunday afternoon and was largely attended, among the young men present being the members of the Yarmouth band who accompanied the funeral procession to the cemetery. The foral offerings were beautiful, numerous crosses and wreaths of lillies and roses being sent by the many triends of the deceased. Among the pretiest of these was an elegant knot of pure white flowers sent by the four young men who were Mr. Gardner as particular friends, and who acted as pail-bearers. Mr. F. S.
