Lord Suffolk and His American Wife

JOE LEITER AND HIS SISTER DAISY, NOW LADY SUFFOLK.

QUEEN MARY'S BEST FRIEND

Duchess of Devonshire Mistress of the Robes—Duchess Like the Queen Devoted to Her Family of Children.

London, July 10.—It is somewhat unusual for a royal personage to possess an intimate friend and companion. Queen Alexandra and Queen Mary have both been fortunate in this respect. Every one in England knows the story of the devoted friendship existing between the Queen Mother and the Honorable Charlotte Knollys, who has absolutely given up her life to serving Queen Alexandra and is in constant attendance upon her. There are many tales of rich and eligible suitors who have tried to persuade Miss Knollys to leave the Queen, but in vain. Now she will stay with the Queen till death claims one or the other of them. She will even give up England should Alexandra decide to make her permanent home in Denmark.

Queen Mary's most intimate friend is the Duchess of Devonshire, who has just accepted the appointment of Mistress of the Robes. In this appointment the Duchess succeeds her aunt, the Duchess of Buccleuch, who has held the post for nearly a quarter of a century but has asked to be released from her duties on the ground of ill health. The Duchess of Devonshire is about 37. She is the daughter of Lady Lansdowne, whom she resembles. Naturally as the eldest child of Lord and Lady Lansdowne she came into touch with life at the court when she was little more than a girl and after her marriage she began entertaining largely, though her husband had not succeeded to the duchy at the time.

Her little house on Park Lane was the centre for a certain set of what was called the "young ladies," including Mary Princess of Wales, who is objected to the gaiety and democracy of the English court after King Edward came into his own. It was at this house that the famous conspiracy against the American invasion of English society is said to have been formed, partly in joke and partly in earnest. The Duchess of Buccleuch and Princess Mary were supposed to be the instigators of the idea, which, it may be mentioned, never amounted to anything.

Sympathy of Tastes. The Duchess is like Queen Mary in character and they have many tastes in common. Both have large families, to whom they devote a great deal of time and personal attention. They are both very capable, with clear minds and the faculty of organizing, and they are both strongly opposed to extravagance and luxury, living in their own homes simple and quiet lives.

The Duchess has seven children. Two of them are now the Marquis of Hartington, heir to the duchy, who is just 15, and Lord Charles, who will be 5 in August. Of the five daughters Lady Maud is 14, Lady Blanche 12, Lady Dorothy 8, Lady Rachel 8, and the youngest of the family, Lady Anne, will be a year old in September. With many beautiful houses at her disposal, the Duchess of Devonshire ranks as one of the foremost hostesses of England and though King Edward very seldom went to her dinners, King George and Queen Mary are constant visitors at her town residence and at her country homes.

Chatsworth House, Devonshire House, in London; Bolton Abbey in Yorkshire; Lismore Castle, Hardwick Hall and Compton Place at Eastbourne are some of the Devonshire residences. Each of these homes is a palace situated in acres of beautiful grounds, with woods and fields, hunting and shooting preserves.

Wonderful House. Devonshire House is filled with treasures, antique carvings, wonderful china and superb pictures, which have been in the family for centuries. The duke and duchess very often loan their drawing rooms for bazaars and entertainments and the outside public pays heavily to see the inside of the house and to catch a glimpse of the simply dressed, slender, delicate looking woman who presides there.

Chatsworth House is where the Devonshire children spend most of their time, and there they lead simpler lives than most children in their position. They are a healthy, happy lot of youngsters, and occasionally they delight the village folk by giving performances of little plays. Last Christmas they gave a dramatized version of Jean Ingelow's "A Lost Wand."

As mistress of the robes, the duchess will not have any particularly onerous duties. She will accompany the Queen to state receptions and will be present in processions in which the Queen takes part. At the coronation she will have many duties to perform toward royal guests at the palace.

Those people who are dreading the new court which it is generally agreed will be absolutely unlike the brilliant court of King Edward VII., find confirmation of their fears in the appointment of the Duchess of Devonshire as mistress of the robes. She is so like Queen Mary in her views that they are sure the two ladies will receive all early Victorian traditions and do away with any sporting or gay element. Said a witty woman who realizes that her day as a royal hostess is over:

"The conversation at the court will be of children, servants, milk puddings and plain sewing."

Chicago, July 14.—Lord and Lady Suffolk, the latter of whom was the beautiful Daisy Leiter, the daughter of Levi Leiter, the Chicago millionaire, are visiting here. Lady Suffolk is one of the few American girls who achieve social position corresponding to the title they marry. Despite the fact that she is a home-loving woman, she is well liked by the nobility, as well as the working people, to whom she gives much of her time. She has encouraged the lace industry among the people about Charlton Towers, her husband's estate in Wiltshire, and opened an employment bureau in the town of Malmesbury. Lord Suffolk is an all-around sportsman, and is fond of acting. He organized a troupe, "The Earl of Suffolk's Travelling Company," which gave performances for charity. Lady Suffolk spent much of her early youth in the society of Washington, where her father had a magnificent house. She met her husband, who was on the staff of Lord Curzon, at the Indian viceroy's court, as the guest of her sister, the late Lady Curzon. Lord Suffolk followed his "American-Indian goddess" to Washington, where the wedding took place. She has three sons.

WOMEN MAKE HER FORTUNE SUFFRAGE GAIN TO HELP WOMEN

Although Majority of 109 Was Recorded in Recent Reading of Shackleton Bill, Measure Will be Shelved.

London, July 14.—The unexpected large majority of 109 for the Shackleton bill gives an important impetus to women's suffrage, which many obstacles must yet be overcome before the principle is legalized by the necessary majority of 145. The women's suffrage bill, introduced by Premier Asquith, in a strong speech against the bill, said that if women had a vote they must inevitably have seats in Parliament, and might take the Speaker's chair or sit in the cabinet. Mr. Balfour opposed this view. He said that it was not government by consent to exclude a large class of the community from voting. Chancellor Lloyd George, a strong supporter of women's suffrage, said if the promoters of the bill would promise to reintroduce the bill in an acceptable form he would support it. Austen Chamberlain opposed women's suffrage in any form. A great crowd of suffragists awaited the result of the vote outside the house, but there was no disorder.

MRS. GUSSIE OGDEN DREWITZ. Cincinnati, July 14.—When Mrs. Gussie Ogden Drewitz was granted a divorce decree June 29 she declared that she would devote her life and fortune from now on to help women struggling to free themselves from misfit matrimonial yokes.

Mrs. Drewitz was the widow of Frank Ogden, a brother of Mrs. Ogden Armour of Chicago, before her marriage to Drewitz and was left $500,000 by Ogden.

Drewitz was a piano salesman when she married him and on their honeymoon trip their special car was profusely decorated with violets and she was afterward called the "Violet Bride."

"I am so happy I could fly," said Mrs. Ogden when she learned that her fourth attempt to secure a divorce was successful.

She intends to use part of her half million dollar fortune in pushing a bill in the Ohio legislature, designed to protect women from slander uttered by men, notably by ex-husbands.

provements in them. It was in her studio that the character dolls first grew that have now crossed the ocean for the delight of American children. They represent the little boys and girls of all nations and are known by the names they have brought from their foreign homes. Pierre's little girl mate is Marie, with small braids showing at each side under her hat, and other small couples are known as Gretchen and Hans and Walter and Elsie. These interesting personages appear in different sizes, the smallest of which can be bought for $1.25, but their prices, of course, increase with their inches.

The greatest charm of some of the other new dolls is their ability to take a part in whatever the child to whom they belong is doing. The stockinette baby with hand-painted face, has a soft, huggable body and can be taken to bed at night without danger to itself or its owner. For this virtue one must pay from $2 to $6.50, according to the size of its possessor.
