But, perhaps, the most unreasonable part of the tariff is the proposition to heavily tax light, cheap wines, and reduce the tax on expensive wine. Here is what Mr. Thomas White telegraphs the Montreal Gazette in regard to the views of sending it.

the wine trade on this subject: The delegation representing the wine importing trade also interviewed Mr. Cartwright, and explained their position and views at length. They state they complain of the proposed tariff on wines because it would tend with the present and views at length. They state they complain of the proposed tariff on wines because it would tend with the present rates of freight and insurance to greatly restrict their consumption. Under it the higher grades would pay much less duty and the middling and lower, in chief consumption, from three to four times the duty under the old tariff. The delegation proposed, on the supposition that more revenue must be had by the Government, that the old scale of duties should be adopted, the specific and ad valorem, and the specific raised 5 cents a gallon, so as to give 15 cents a gallon, so as to give 16 cents a gallon, so as to give 17 cents, which yould constitute an increase of the impost upon low grades of 8 cents a gallen, running up, in proportion to the value, to 40 cents. Thus champagues, instead of being reduced to one dollar a case as at present, will bear a rate slightly exceeding the actual rate.
