Death by tradition

new policy for some bars; for example, 'light' beers are sold at reduced prices. Hartt says competitive prices for food and non-alcoholic beverages lessen the amount of alcohol a student may drink.

As orientation festivities sweep through most campuses, many students will be drinking with no thought of the consequences. And unless they are careful or just lucky, Dave Hartt is afraid there will be more accidents and more deaths. "responsible drinking is always going to be an issue on campus," he said.
