All around the world, every day, exciting discoveries are made in the fields of philosophy and science. Today we will take a look at the incredible new breakthrough in the field of perceptual stuff that the Bakers at Eye Patch Donutz, Downsview, Ontario have made. Last week, we learned about professor Broad's fine theory of sense-data as interpreted by dental hygienist H. Wisdom. Today, headquack Gus elaborates on the potential his firm has realized by putting the R&D dollars into Canada's dynamic Epistemological Leadership Program.

Gus Jr., chief of Cruller and Fritter research, discovered that Sensea could exist independent of a physical object. This, asserts Gus Jr., means a substantial savings in flour costs.

Customers at Eye Patch Donutz have demonstrated a marked inability to perceive the absence of physical reality in their dough-like snacks.

Assistant deep-fryer Weegs Holman made the observation that sensea can be cooked much more quickly than its physical counterpart.

DETCHADIDN'TKNOW...
A PERSISTENT RUMOUR HERE AT YORK MAINTAINS THAT THE KEELE CAMPUS WAS ORIGINALLY DESIGNED FOR A SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA LOCATION. ACTUALLY, THE PLANS WERE PURCHASED FROM N.A.S.A. IN 1948

Bill Keane is dead, and Jeffy and especially BILLY were involved in a really bad accident with a can of formaldehyde, so I'm doing the strip today. Remember me, I'm the postman that Billy always stops to talk to when he is running around the neighbourhood leaving a conspicuous trail of dots and arrows [like that]. And today, I am going to do a special story about the things I don't want to see in York's new student building... if they ever build it.
