THE CIRCULATION OF THE BLOOD 453

fear for the decadence of England. I think that our children and our successors will find themselves in a commonwealth, different it may be from that for which Eliott, and Pym, and Hampden struggled, but one which will be identical in the substance of its aims—great, worthy, and well to ive in.

ve

5 a

nd

las ne

in.

ral erng uis, ït es nd he ch he m se he at Ie is

e, b: Sıd I n se y le n d 15 0 e. if d It 5, y S 0

THE END