QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. Miscellaneous.

SUPPLIES.

E. Flindall, if you communicate with Alex. Brown Milling & Elevator Co., Princess and Adelaide St., Toronto, you can probably secure the supplies you wish.

PURCHASE OF COW—A HORSE TRADE.

1. A bought a cow from B. A gave a lien note on it for ten months in this way: In case of accident, another of its value. A sold cow, being he was scarce of feed, but has others of its value. (a) Can B collect note before it is due? (b) Is it due as soon as cow is sold? (c) Can B go and get first cow before note is due, note not being due till May?

2. A traded horses with B. A had to give a little difference, but was not able just then. Will pay a little later. Can B make trouble, or collect at once? Ontario. SUBSCRIBER.

Ans.—1. (a), (b) and (c). No.

2. Yes.

REGISTRATION OF THOROUGHBREDS.

Is the Thoroughbred stallion, Tom Moore, once owned about St. Catharines, registered? If so, state number. Give name of the dam of Louise, once owned by the late John White, Milton, and who owned her after White, and address. S. V.

Ans.—1. There are several horses registered in the American Studbook under this name, but none that can be traced as having been owned in Canada.

2. The same answer applies to Louise, more particulars would need to be furnished. There is no studbook for Thoroughbreds in Canada. The American Jockey Club, New York, has the record for that breed, and could, perhaps, supply the information.

CLAIM TO SERVICE FEE.

A has a cow which was served by bulls belonging to B, C, D and E, thirteen or fourteen times, coming in season regularly. She was only served by E's bull once, that being the last time, and did not come in season afterwards. A says the cow calved two months before due to E's bull. Who is entitled to the service fee for the bull? SUBSCRIBER.

Ans.—From the statement as given, it would appear that the owners of each of the bulls is entitled to a fee, provided there was no agreement as to insuring a calf, as each had given their time and the service of their bulls in the case of a cow that was a freak or of abnormal character.

BUILDING A CHIMNEY.

I would like a little information about building a chimney. We intend putting in a fireplace, and wish to run the stove-pipe from cooking range into same chimney over the mantel. Do you think it would draw all right, or should the chimney be divided and have two flues? At present, we are using a chimney that was into one from a fireplace, but it is only partially divided and smokes a lot at times. J. F. W.

Ans.—We know that this combination is working all right in many cases. A builder informs us it is wise to put a damper in the wall, just over the grate and below the stovepipe hole, to check the possibility of smoke being forced down the chimney by the wind. Success in this, as in the case of any chimney, depends on the chimney being at least a foot higher than the highest point of the roof, as the wind striking the roof and rebounding is liable to prevent the chimney drawing properly and causing it to smoke.

Fistula and Poll Evil
