The May.

BY SYLVIA HUNTING.

The streams are laughing,
The May is here;
The trees are budding,
The skies are clear;
The birdlings sing;
"Tis spring! 'tis spring!"

Come to the woodland And gaily dance, For joy is beaming In every glance; Laugh, sing and play 'Tis May! 'tis May!

Pink and white blossoms

MAY 1, 1897.

Ή... a bicycle. In t ave strength coasy-running ou

On every tree,— Peach blooms for Edith, Apples for me.
And the bells ring:
"Tis spring! 'tis spring!' RITH & CO e West, Toronto.

We are so happy! In you green shade Where the winds say : "Tis May! 'tis May!

Here are wood violets
We've brought our Queen,
And lilles shining
'Mid sheathes of green.
Oh happy day,—
'Tis May! tis May! -The Ave Maria.

FIVE-MINUTE'S SERMON.

DUTIES OF PARENTS.

"I am the Good Shepherd: I know mine."— (St. John x. 14.)

Our Divine Lord, my dear brethren, not only asserts that He is "the Good Shepherd," but also proves Himself to be so by the care and solicitude which He has for the well being of His flock.
He spared no pain, no labor, in His watchful care over His sheep, and finally shed the last drop of His Blood in their defence, leaving an example to those who are likewise shepherds in their own sphere. St. Augustine says that parents are shepherds in their houses, and that they must have the same care for their children that a shepherd has for his flock. They, like the Good Shepherd, must know and feed their sheep, protect them from the wolves, and go before, leading them in the right way. Parents, you must realize that the sheep entrusted to your care are spiritual beings, that they have souls, that they are images of God, created by God the Father, redeemed by God the Son, and sanctified by the Holy Spirit, and that, in heaven or hell, they shall continue to live forever. Stainless and bright in baptismal purity are these sheep when placed in your hands to be led to their inheritance of the kingdom of heaven. In order that you may be good shepherds you must know your children. Know them interiorly, what their dispositions are, what they wish, desire, and aim at ; what troubles they have, what they need, what is good or evil, expedient or injurious to them, what their faults and defects are, whether they are inclined to this or that vice, that evil habits may not be allowed to grow up and take root in them.

"Hast thou children," says Sacred Scripture, "instruct them and bow down their neck from their childhood. You must instruct your children in the truths of religion. Impress upon them the end for which they were created. Speak to them of the future life, of the eternal happiness or the eternal misery which awaits us-a heaven full of joy or a hell full of suffering. Speak to them of God's knowledge, who knows and sees all things; of God's justice, who leaves no good unrewarded and no evil unpunished. Instruct and warn them regarding all things appertaining to salvation. Let the words uttered by Tobias, when on his deathbed, be re-echoed in every household : Hear, my son, the words of my nouth, and lay them as a foundation in thy mind, and take heed thou never consent to sin nor transgress the commandments of the Lord our God. Never suffer pride to reign in thy mind or in thy words, for from it all perdition took its beginning. See thou never do to another what thou wouldst hate to have done to thee by Eat thy bread with the hungry and needy. Bless God at all times, and desire of Him to direct thy ways and that all thy counsels may abide in Him. Fear not, my son ; we indeed lead a poor life, but we shall have many good things if we tear God, and depart from all sin, and do that which is good."

You must protect your children from the wolves. Know who their companions are. Watch over them that no wolf in sheep's clothing may enter amongst the flock, that none of the lock may stray into the wolf's den of the dance-hall, the public house, or any of the other miscalled places of amusement. Be not like the hireling who leaveth the sheep and flieth when he seeth the wolf coming.

You, like good shepherds, must go before your flock leading it in the right way. Children are taught far more by example than by words. You yourselves must be virtuous and Godfearing, diligent in the practice of your Christian duties. Do you go punctually to Confession, or are you slothful and careless, and put off for a year, or years, the worthy reception of Holy Communion? Are all your acts influenced by the consciousness of God's presence? Are you just and forgiving in your transactions with others? Are you solicitous to perform good works, works of charity, of mercy? Would you have your children live according to the dictates of their holy faith? Then set them good example and they are sure to walk in your footsteps. "If any man have your footsteps. "If any man have not care of his own, and especially those of his house, he hath denied the faith, and is worse than an infidel."

Health and vigor are essential for success Therefore make yourself strong and healthy by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

OUR BOYS AND GIRLS.

To One Who Said: "Remember May! Oh! could I e'er, forgetting The month that in my heart In memory's jewelled setting Dwells holy and apart.

Deny the first glad greeting That on my eyelids smiled,— The Maytime, fair and fleeting, That made me Mary's child?

Or when mid spring's soft laughter The "Help of Christians" came, Then and forever after To bless me with her name?

Or that sweet morn when, kneeling Within the holy shrine, The Lord, Himself revealing, First touched these lips of mine,

My strength to be forever?— O First Communion Day, I can forget thee never, As long as May is May!

Or that bright hour when giving My troth to heart of gold,— His still, pure, warm and living, Through sorrows manifold?

Nay, I could ne'er forget thee, Sweet mouth! Thou shin'st apart; A jewel fair I set thee Within my inmost heart.

And sometimes, thoughtful, sitting Life's downward path half-way, I think it would be fitting Were I to die in May. -" Mary," in Ave Maria.

The Madonna's Portrait.

Long and wearily had the painter labored upon a Madonna, but yet an-other day left it unfinished. The first ray of the morning sun had found him sitting with folded hands before the half-finished picture, nor had he gone from it when the last ray of the setting sun looked in at the opposite window.

Thus, day after day, he had sought in vain after that celestial expression of the Virgin Mother, which his soul had often seen in its dreams but could not now recall. Sometimes, when his soul forgot its earthly dwelling-place, and all its sorrows, and went joyously back to revel amongst the joys of its own home, it would bring to the painter, on its return, as it were, pictures of heavenly loveliness, which he too

The birds sung sweetly in the grove near by, and gladdened the painter's heart with their cheerfulness, for the song of a happy bird was one of the greatest joys of his life.

The summer air came in at the pen window, laden with the perfume of wild flowers, and with the musical hum of the bees; the happy kids frisked by the side of their feeding dams afar off on the mountain slope, seeming to play close against the clear blue sky. Everything looked pleas-ant in the bright sunshine, and everything that felt it seemed to re-joice in it. He could not yet despair, for all these glories of nature gave

Once more he took his pencil, and labored on with a light heart. Once again the Madonna was finished. He gazed upon it long and earnestly, but yet was not satisfied.

''Alas!" he cried, "it is not the Virgin Mother that I have painted, 'tis only a smiling goddess of summer toying with a child." And again he wiped away his work, almost despairing in his heart.

Not long after this, the painter sat at his window watching the shadows as they played to and fro over the bosom of the neighboring lake, and listening to the joyful melody with which the whole forest rang.

The sun had gone down behind the mountains, and the shout of the shep-herd, calling together his flocks went echoing from hill to hill, till the farth-est wandering lamb heard it and turned homew heard the evening note of the thrush, whose song seems ever a requiem for some long-lost mate. One after another the stars came out, heralding the queenly moon that slowly rose above the forest. And as he sat enjoying all these things, he fell asleep and dreamed.

He dreamed that while he was lying in the shade of the wood, looking upon the beautiful flowers around him, a female form rose up from out the bosom of a lily, and stood before him. At first she seemed shrouded with a thick mist, but it cleared away before the painter's gaze, and revealed to him the bright vision. And never before, in all his dreams of beauty, had he beheld so lovely an embodiment of all graces and beauties. Her flowing robe glistened with its own whiteness as she walked in the light. The slender violets were hardly bent under her feet. and everything she passed was covered with beauty. In every flower he beheld a reflected image of the vision, as if each one carried a mirror in its

She came near to the astonished painter, and said, in a cheerful tone: "Behold me, for whom thou hast long sought for in vain. I am the Spirit of Beauty. I was born in heaven, but I have long dwelt here on earth, that I might cheer the hearts of men. But they do not look for me here, though I am always near them. They search the skies, thinking that I never come down from heaven. thou at last hast sought me aright, and so hast found me here in thy grove, not away in heaven. So I am everywhere; in the forest and field; on the mountain and in the lake; in every lofty tree, in every humble flower. Here I gladly abide, wishing for man to see and love me, that I may dwell in his heart and bless him. Yet he passes along in the path of life, so dreary without me, thinking not that I am in

Now I am thy companion, and I will work with thee till men see me in al thy works. The spirit ceased and the painter The moon was shining full in his face, and it seemed to him as if she had flown up to it, and was looking down upon him. glorious vision!" he cried,

"thou art in heaven, on earth, and in my soul; leave me not, I pray, though Thenceforth the painter lived, as it were in a new world. He saw beauties in all nature, and each new beauty he ound added to the joys of his life. Again the Madonna was finished And now the canvas glowed with a life and beauty, more noble and affecting than the summer like freshness and youth of the las: Madonna, but yet not perfect. It seemed as if he had painted a grace as a mother. There was in her face that expression of joy and contentment, where lurks some anxi-ety, which you have seen upon a other when holding in her arms her sleeping babe. And on the face of the child you might read his gentleness and meekness, but you could not see there his divinity. It was a life-like picture of motherly love and child-ish affection, but all in it was human. The painter felt that there was something wanting in it, and he knew that it was the holy exfied, he laid away the picture, hardly expecting that he should ever better it.

pression which he had so long and earnestly sought. And still unsatis-

One summer evening when the fields and groves were all so quiet in the moonlight that it seemed like Nature's hour of prayer, the bell of the church, which stood alone in the valley, began to call the villagers to Vespers. And when the painter heard it, and saw how happy they all seemed who were hastening to the church, he went and joined with them. As he sat in the dimly lighted church and looked up amongst the dark overhanging beams of the roof, feelings of awe and grandeur came over him. And all the while the priest and the people were praying, the painter was ost in holy meditation.

Soon the organist began the noble symphonies of the "Stabat Mater," filling the church and the hearts of the worshippers with its sweet music. And after the organ had ceased the echoes played it over again and again up amongst the lofty arches of the roof, till it rose to heaven to join the angels' song. The painter's heart was filled with love and peace. He went from the church to his lonely room, and, taking the long-neglected Madonna from the corner, once more put it upon his easel. While he sat efore it he fell asleep.

And again the Spirit of Beauty appeared to him; but now there was and fallen, affording numberless op-with her another noble spirit, whose portunities for the production of dis-Beauty was turned toward heaven; but the other spirit locked upon the earth, pointing with her finger to heaven. Then the Spirit of Beauty said:

"Man, I have been with thy heart Thou hast done all that we can do. Thy works are beautiful. I cannot make them more. But listen to my sister spirit, for she would make thee her own." Then the other said:

"I am the Crisit of Police would dwell with thee and be thy dear companion. Thou hast never found me in the grove, nor canst thou find Only my footprints are on the woodland and the lake. If thou wilt but open thy heart to me I will bless thee higher her finger towards heaven, "I would lead thee there; wilt thou

And the painter gladly received the

And now the twin spirits which were dwelling with him in his dreams. came and dwelt with him in reality. for now he felt more than its beautyhe felt its religion.

Long ago this happy painter died, but his immortal works are with us yet, ministers of purity and holiness, teach ing us beautiful lessons. Chief among them all is a beautiful Madonna, the noblest glory of his country, and a joy to the world. The mild countenance of the Virgin Mother is truly wonderful; words could never half describe it. There repose love for God and man, joy and anxiety; and over all is spread the blissful expression of a young mother's love. And the holy child, half down from his mother's knee, looks earnestly into her face, as if he were saying, "Mother, I would be saving unhappy man, can I not go?" This is what the twin spirits of Beauty and Religion did for the painter. It we listen, with our whole heart, to the silent teachings of Nature and Art, they may teach us where we also may find the heavenly companions.

Fatal Result of Delay.

without me, thinking not that I am in the flowers under his feet, as well as in the stars above his head. Did he mind more the flowers which lie in his path, he would mind less the thorns there.

CHATS WITH YOUNG MEN.

We have much pleasure in producing, from the Church Progress, the second part of Judge Dunne's talk to young men, which is as follows:

Your Calling. Many young men ask-How shall I find my vocation?

Notice what you have read, and what it is of your reading that has most attracted your ambition. We are told that Cowley was made a poet by finding a copy of Spenser; that Corregio was led to become a painter by reading the life of Michael Angelo; that Richardson's "Lives of the Painters" made Reynolds an artist; and we know that a gallant Spanish knight, solacing himself in the hospital at Pampeluna with a perusal of the Lives of the Saints, became thereby the founder of one of the greatest religious orders of ancient or modern times. there is something above all this in the matter of determining vocations, and most of you, I hope, know how to get safe direction on the subject.

How may I succeed in my vocation? Ah! that is the question the new re-cruit is always asking. It has been answered innumerable times, and the answer is, "Always do the best you can with whatever you have undertaken." Do not waste time questioning as to whether you have a great natural talent for your work; if you have had freedom in your choice, you have, in all probability, more talent for the work you have selected than you have for anything else; and having made your choice, all that remains for you is, to take your talent as you find it, and to do with it the best you can. Of course there is such a thing as great natural talent for special work -genius, in fact; and I will not breathe one word in derogation of the admiration, reverence and awe with which, as a great gift from God, it ought ever be regarded. But not one man in a hundred thousand has it; not one in a million is able to bear it. a fire of such fierce, consuming flame, that it were better for you to go down on your knees and thank God for withholding it, rather than, with Promethean rashness, ask for its endowment. The question for most of us, then, is not, have we great natural talent for our work, but can we, by care, by patient, persevering labor, develop power sufficient to succeed in our vocation, even though we may not have been able to show at first any great natural aptitude for it. Can we do this? All along, down through all the history of all ages, the answer comes ringing back: "We can, if we will."

Is not oratory a gift? Almost every one will tell you that it is. This world is now, historically, some six thousand years old. During that time hundreds of nations have risen, thriven too, were failures; how he filled his mouth with stones, and gnashed his eeth upon them in an agony of rage : shaved his head and hid himself from the sight of men, until, by patient labor, he had perfected himself in the art by which he sought renown. All along the line you will find the same story. You will find it with Beaconsfield in debate, with Bulwer in litera-Giacinta in piety, with Domenichino in art, and hundreds of other cases known to you now, or with which I hope you will soon become familiar.

"As you study the secret of their success, you will find that it consisted. not in gazing upon the distant future, Then the Spirit of Religion raised but in faithful utilization of the everliving present. Young sportsmen crane their necks looking afar off for game while the old hunter is quietly knocking, down his deer almost at their feet. In your anxiety to accomother spirit, for her loveliness had drawn him toward her. The sister spirits dwelt together in his heart. He but, day by day, do the work which always of great things in the distance, but, day by day, do the work which lies within your reach, appealing to you for attention. Even so, and only thus, will your hand gain in cunning, your mind broaden in conception, your And when again the pious painter will grow in power, your heart heard the mournful "Stabat Mater" swell with courage; and when echoing through the lofty church his whole heart was filled with its music; to every man it comes once, t not oftener in life, while the vain dreamer, who has been supinely waiting, is swept aside in the mighty rush of events, you will be able to seize the opportunity, and, as with giant strength, hold it all your own.

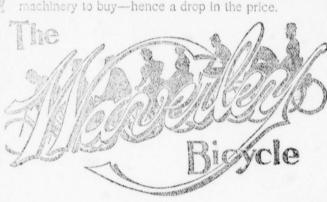

In the game of chess the pawn is the most insignificant piece, yet it has passed into a proverb with Caissa's votaries that to properly play the pawn is to be master of the game. The game of life is played with a thousand pieces, most of them of com paratively trifling value, but you wil never succeed in it until you come to have a proper reverence for what seem Michael Angelo was explaining one day to a visitor what he had been doing to a statue since his friend's last visit when it was thought the statue was finished; how he had sharpened a little here, softened a little there, let his chisel fall with almost infinitesmal touch upon the corner of a lip, the ex pression of an eve, the delineation of an almost undiscoverable muscle. "But," said his friend, interrupting in astonishment, "are not these things trifles after all?" "No," said the artist, gravely, "they are not; these are the things which go to make per-

Good things should be praised—Shakespeare

That is why there was so much praise for the famous 1896 Waverley Bicycle. We continue making It this year, greatly improved, and have no expensive that has won so much praise now $75

new '97 Waverley is a masterplece of blcycle construc $100

Write for Catalogue.

INDIANA BICYCLE COMPANY, - Indianapolis, Ind.

not one in a million is able to bear it. on it eleven years before he gave it to You do not know yet what power there the world. Some books of most easy may be in them. Notice what has reading were entirely rewritten five, ten, fifteen, and, in one case I remember, seventeen times, before getting to the printer's hands.

United States, who on one occasion travelled one hundred and eighty miles travelled one hundred and eighty miles but, for the most part in railway dejust to change a single word in one of pots, waiting for trains; in cabs and his opinions, before publication; a hacks, and occasional halts at out of word not affecting the decision, but the way country inns. Cardinal Manonly the turn of a phrase, as a matter of style. Such is the care some men in England, did more work visible to take of their work, while foolish, lazy people, too confident of their ability, oo careless of their reputation, too contemptuous of other judgment, say "Let it pass; it is well enough and will not be noticed." Very likely it passes without notice, and the author wise, but the careful judge I speak of was passed to a higher place. face shone so with the brightness of face shone so with the brightness of her divinity that he could not bear the sight. But it soon beamed on him with a gentler light, that changed his fear to love. The two spirits stood before the world, activated by the fore him holding each other by the fore I cite these things for your encour fear to love. The two spirits stood be fear to love. The two spirits stood be fore him holding each other by the hand. And the face of the Spirit of herald Mercury new lighted on a heaven kissing hill?" O too well you anything more orderly, more finished, heaven kissing hill?" How his first efforts, more nearly perfect, as a work of art. more nearly perfect, as a work of art. than Gibbon's "Decline and Fall?" Yet the author tells us that "at the outset all was dark and doubtful that even after seven years' work he came near abandoning the whole prospark convulses for a moment the brain and sends down to the very eart a glow of inspiration.

hopefully; you will prevail at last, whatever the work may be, and accomplish more than at first you even dreamed of doing.

"Every man," says Gibbon, "has two educations—one which he receives from others; the other, and more important one, that which he gives himself." To-morrow you begin your second education. Give your talents a fair chance. You do not know yet what power there may be in them Work in the future as some of you have worked here, and there is hardly anything you may not accomplish. have seen, since my arrival here, proofs of labor which astonished me. I said to some of you in the hall, after the first night's display of your powers, that you had frightened me, and that instead of going to your regatta yesterday, as I intended, I was going to shut myself up and work before venturing to address you. I have fection, and therefore should not be seen here minds which are able and considered trifles."

"Gray's Elegy "is a little poem of a and will be if they choose; therefore, I capeat, give your talents a fair chance. been done by economy of time.

Cardinal Wiseman wrote that en chanting account of the Church of the the printer's hands.

I knew a Chief-Justice once, now a member of the Supreme Court of the United States, who on one occasion with all the appliances of composition, his day; yet, somehow or other, he managed to turn out, every year or two, a book which would have made the literary fortune of our most distinguished writers. Dr. Good translated Lucreting while rights in his contraction. tius while riding in his carriage, in he streets of London, visiting his patients. Burney learned French and Italian on horseback, riding from one country house to another, giving music essons. Kirk White learned Greek while walking to and from the lawyer's office, where, at the time, he earned his daily bread. A great French Chancellor wrote one of his books during the moments of waiting for dinner. Madam de Genlis wrote several of her's while awaiting the pleasure of her princess pupil.

What does all this teach? Three things at least. First, the importance of work; second, that there is always ject in despair. Dryden says of some of his finest work that "it was at first only a confused mass of troubled thoughts, tumbling over one another in the dark." "Invention," says Buffon, "depends on patience. Contemplate your subject long; it will anything like surpassing excellence, gradually unfold, till a sort of electric that, unless you find a work congenia to your tastes and suited to your powers, it will be almost impossible for you to stand the strain required for If you have ambition, have also great success; whereas, if you are courage. Work on steadily, faithfully, fortunate in your selection, the effort will be comparatively easy, for,

The labor we delight in, physics pain, If you profit by the suggestions I have recalled to your minds, you will learn to labor; but you must also learn

The Medicine for Liver and Kidney Complaint.—Mr. Victor Anger, Ottawa, writes: "I take great pleasure in recommending to the general public Parmelee's Fills, as a cure for Liver and Kidney Complaint. I have doctored for the last three years with leading physicians, and have taken many medicines which were recommended to me without relief, but atter taking eight of Parmelee's Fills I was quite relieved, and now I feel as free from the disease as before I was troubled."

the "SUN, factory for the Bicycle

NAL CARDS.

LBOT ST., LONDON, O. 185 QUEEN'S AVE, impaired hearing, blesome throats. Eyes. Hours. 12 to 4. Cuban, Sc.; 14 Roman Stat. 10c.; 8 Samca, 12c.; 10 Japa rica, 10c.; 7 Ecuador, 1/c. orea, 10c.; 5 Newfoundland, 1/c.

mps Bought. ms, 7 Ann St., Toronto,

XXXX B TO CO. of Toronto, Ltd.

(Bavarian Hopped Ales)

your handwriting

AN PEN CO.

High-Class

Church

Hobbs Mfg. Co. London, Ont. ASK FOR DESIGNS

RAL OFFERS ty to Possess a mily Bible at Outlay.

tire Canonical Scripte decree of the Council rom the Latin vulgate, d with the Hebrew littons in divers language, the control of the council rom the Latin vulgate, d with the Hebrew littons in divers language, at Douay, A. D. 180%, by the English College Revised and correctlementine edition of amotations by the Rev. is added the History Bible, and Calmet's Hatory Catholic Dictionshe edited by the Rev. In the Theological rices Borromeo, Philaed under the special et he Most Rev. Jas. Shop of Philadelphiahistorical and chrome of the Epistles and undays and Holydays and of the most notable calendar, and other impal matters. With elemnot other appropriate renotonly a blessing in re not only a blessing in rehold, but an ornament is 12; x 10; x 4 inches, d is beautifully bound. A ceash to accompany the Bible by express to mon, charges for earliestes will give credit pulmon of THE CATHOLIO and the Record for Pollars. Subscribers to nexpress office can to the one nearest their to that if, on examinatisfied with the pure pulmon of the pulmon o

LY BIBLE ER EDITION) E Latin vulgate. Neatly 10 x 7 x 2, and weighs 9
s book will be sent to conditions as the larger lars and a year's credia n to The Catholic

o send remittances by en cash is sent the letter be registered. MAS COFFEY,