The unqualified assertion that the Germans are in possession of Dead Man's hill, northwest of Verdun, is reiterated by the correspondent of The Tages Zeitung at the Verdun front.

"Not only hill 265, called Dead Man's hill, but also the enemy positions on Hill 295, included under the designation Dead Man's hill, are in the saw a few months after they had been working on the roads, and I had great difficulty in realizing that the sleek, well-fed, contented-looking people I saw were identical with the sullen savage-looking horrors whom I had known a short time before. Their ideas of road-making were, it is true, at first somewhat primitive. For example, when I sent one of them for a wheelbarrow, he would make appearance with it in his arms, as if I were a baby; then they would scoop up the earth in their hands, place it on a shovel, and carry the shovel in their arms to the place where they

The misunderstanding in regard to the real situation, according to German reports has been due to the fact that the French, whose maps designate that the French, whose maps designate this designation to Hill 295, when they were driven from Hill 295, and in a short time they were working away with almost as much handiness as a gang of navview.
