ITALY AND THE GREAT WAR.

Signs are accumulating of a crisis between Italy and Austria. Italy is a member of the Triple Alliance and her allies are Germany and Austria. But she declined to join her allies in their war against the Entente Powers on the ground that she was under no obligation to join them in aggressive warfare as the alliance was only a defensive one. For the past seven months Italy has maintained neutrality and at the same time she has been occupied in strengthening her army and navy, particularly the former, and putting them on a war footing. She has also made it plain to all the world that she intends to get something out of the war. Her policy apparently is either to remain neutral or attack Austria, which would of course bring her into conflict with Germany and Turkey. It would appear that she has no intention of attacking the Entente Allies. Her sea-coast is so long and her navy, while of some considerable strength, is not equal to the fleet which Britain and France have in the Mediterranean. She will not join the Entente Allies in the name of sentimentalism like the romantic knight, as the Giornale d'Italia puts it, she is willing to aid Pan-Germanism. She is prepared to remain neutral if Austria will give up Trentino to her. But Austria refuses, as this means the ceding of Trieste, the most important of the few commercial ports Austria possesses and of Pola, the most important of the few naval bases which Austria has. Italy insists, however, not only from a material advantage to be obtained from the sentimental reason that this section is a portion of Italy, "Irrredenta," which was unredeeded in 1866. Prince von Buelow has been in Italy for some months endeavoring to placate Italy and to satisfy her by offering Trent, an inland part of Austria north of Verona. Von Buelow's diplomacy would seem to have failed. Last Monday the Italian Minister of Posts and Telegraphs issued orders suspending the exchange of telegraphic money orders with Austria-Hungary and also suppressed the travelling post office on trains bound for the Austrian frontier. Today's messages show that the tension has increased. Germans and Austrians are leaving Italy on the advice of their consuls. It is clear a crisis has come about, and that it is a case of Austria ceding what is almost politically impossible or facing war with Italy. In view of this state of affairs the Germans have sent Bavarian troops to defend the Tyrol. We have no doubt that the bombardment of the Dardanelles has precipitated the crisis, as Italy has her eyes on part of the Asiatic territory of Turkey.

Creditable Conduct of Naval Reservists.

Department Col. Secy., March 20, 1915. Editor Evening Telegram. Dear Sir,—I beg to forward the enclosed correspondence, the publication of which in the issues of your paper will no doubt be of interest to the public. Yours truly, ARTHUR MEWS, Deputy Col. Sec. Government House, St. John's, Newfoundland. March 12, 1915. Honourable Colonial Secretary. R. N. Reservists on R. M. S. Mongolian. An annex—for the information of Ministers—copy of a letter received from Lieut. Commander MacDermott under date 19th instant, covering copy of a letter from the Master of R. M. S. Mongolian, reporting on the conduct of the R. N. Reservists who sailed on that ship. As it is highly to the credit of the Reservists, it might be published, if Ministers think proper. (Sgd.) W. E. DAVIDSON, Governor. H. M. S. Calypso, St. John's, Nfld., 10 March, 1915. Sir,—I have the honour to forward the attached letter received from the Master of the S. S. Mongolian for your Excellency's information, with the request that Your Excellency will return the letter so that I may forward it to the Admiralty for the information of the Lords' Commissioners. I have, etc. (Sgd.) A. MACDERMOTT, Lieut. Commander. His Excellency Sir Walter E. Davidson, K.C.M.G., etc., etc., Governor of Newfoundland. S. S. Mongolian, Halifax, N. S., 3 March, 1915. Commander MacDermott, R. N., H. M. S. Calypso, St. John's, N. F. It is but just that I should submit the following to your notice. As you are aware the above ship arrived on board the "Mongolian" Captain Goodridge at once established regular discipline and routine. This he maintained consistently with great credit to himself and Petty Officers under him to my entire satisfaction. Shortly after leaving port rough and foggy weather was encountered and as ship proceeded East weather became worse each day. On 22nd and 23rd ult., a heavy gale raged from N. E. with very high sea, causing ship to labour considerably. On the latter date trouble arose through the giving out of temporary repairs done to the ship while in St. John's. Considerable water was found to be making its way into fore end of ship. After consultation I decided to return here. I requested Capt. Goodridge with ratings under his command to assist me in every way consistent with requirements. It is needless to say that such help was given in the most energetic and cheerful manner by way of preparing for any emergency. Manned deck pumps (which were kept

Somebody's Son.

Somebody's sons are called to the fight. Will it be yours, or mine? Somebody's sons must fight for the right. Shall it be mine or thine. Somebody's sons on their lips a song. Will march to the front so gay. Somebody's sons in the pastime throng. How many return, how many stay? Somebody's husband is among the dead. Will it be yours, or mine? Somebody's children will beg for bread. Will it be mine, or thine? We in our sorrow must walk alone. While deep in our hearts 'is the prayer. Ever a cry to the Lord of Hosts. For courage and strength to bear. Somebody's lover is coming home. Will it be yours or mine? He saved the flag and honor won. Will it be mine or thine? Eagerly, tenderly, we will welcome them. And kiss from their tired eyes. The memories of all the dying men. The horror that in them lies. Somebody's son was called to the Cross. It was not yours or mine. Did Mary pray in the hour of her loss? That it be another's son, not mine. She had her hopes, as we have ours. Her hopes in the grave were laid. Can we do more than give them all. Though death is the price to be paid. —Lorena M. Cook.
