THE SPEED OF THE PITCHERS.

Some experiments have been made at Princeton University field for the purpose of testing the speed of the pitcher. A distance of 60 feet was measured off, and with the aid of an electrical attachment in the pitcher's hand, and another in the catcher's hand, the exact time in transit was read off by a chronoscope loaned by Prof. Baldwin for the purpose. Altman and Bradley pitched a number of times, but the day was cold and the pitchers were not in practice, so the speed was slightly under the normal rate. The result of the observations showed that Altman's speed was 6 of a second. Bradley threw a ball in 59. The exact time was not continued in warm weather, and Prof. Hinton and Warren hope to measure the speed of the fastest pitcher in the country.

As Woodbine track Harley Davidson succeeded in cutting the quarter mile, un-paced, record, flying at start, to 27 seconds. The previous mark was 27.2-5.

ONE GOOSEBERRY KILLS A CHILD.

A little 5-year-old daughter of John Wellworth, of Delphos, O., died as the result of a peculiar misadventure. She was running through the garden when she fell on her face. Scrambling to her feet, she immediately complained of something causing her head to throb. A physician was called, who was unable to diagnose the case. The child grew worse, and died four hours after the accident in great agony. An examination of the body showed a small green gooseberry was found in a small recess far back in the head. The only theory which can be advanced is that in falling the berry was introduced into the child's nose, and by drawing her breath quickly the berry was drawn into the head. The gooseberry was about the size of a small hickory nut.

Didn't Like Married Life.

William Woodyatt Said He Would Not be Tied Down.

He Was Therefore Handed Up for Non-Support—Sent for Trial.

Wm. Woodyatt, a Fullarton street carriage trimmer, was charged at the Police Court today with non-support of his wife, and he has only been married a year. On Oct. 4, 1894, he took Mary Fellows as his wife, and they lived together until April 1, Mary working as a cigar-maker and William at carriage-making. Both earned about the same amount weekly, but in April both threw up their situations and went to Sheldon, Mich., where Mrs. Woodyatt's sister lived. Woodyatt only remained a week, when he returned to this city. His wife wanted to come back too, but her hubby sent this sweet little note to her:

"Mary—The best thing you can do is to stay where you are if you know when you are in luck. For it's like this: I have just begun to find out my mistake in getting married. I got taste enough of the down life last winter to satisfy me, and I will not be tied down again to the best woman that ever lived. If you come back here I go somewhere else. I have made up my mind I won't be tied down to nobody. I am drinking every drop of the rest of my time. I haven't got a cent but what I borrowed—25—to get a couple of drinks and post this letter. I won't be tied down to no woman. I have to go to Mexico to get out of it."

Mrs. Woodyatt got money from friends and came back to London. She gave birth to a child in August, and she claims that all the assistance she received was 50 cents. Woodyatt, she said, had threatened to shoot her if she prosecuted.

Woodyatt was sent for trial. When told he could be sent to Kingston for three years for his offense he offered to return to his wife. "You deserve every hour of the term," said the magistrate.

Daniel Curran, charged with being drunk and disorderly, was allowed to go, as his wife withdrew the complaint. She was going to prosecute him for non-support, but Curran promised to stop drinking and expressed his willingness to live with her.

Fred Reynolds was fined $1 for riding a wheel on the sidewalk where the road was impassable.

John Butts, charged with malicious damage to property, was discharged from custody. Butts had accidentally broken a window at Jeffries' Hotel, King street, and a dispute as to the value of the glass led to his arrest. The charge of neglecting to support his wife, he was allowed to go on suspended sentence.

AN AWFULLY SUDDEN DEATH

Their bodies were horribly mangled. There is a sharp curve near the crossing, and the engineer claims he did not see the wagon until too late to stop the train.

Luxury Run Wild.

Miss Vanderbilt's Wedding Trousseau Is Described.

Her Garments Are Rich and Exquisitely Beautiful. Costly Jewels.

As the days come on apace the time draws nearer when Miss Constance Vanderbilt will be changed from an American maiden into a titled English woman—the Duchess of Marlborough.

While the invitations to the notable wedding, which is to take place in St. Thomas' Church, Fifth avenue, New York, have not yet been issued, the most elaborate preparations are being made for the great event, and it is said that a small host of bridesmaids will contribute to the elegance of the occasion.

For the express gratification of the exclusive few, the announcement is made that invitations will be issued only to the fashionable set, as the affair will doubtless be one of the most elaborate functions that can be arranged.

The bridal outfit is the matter that is now engrossing the attention of the duchess-elect, and, accompanied by her mother, and frequently her maid, she spends several hours each day on shopping expeditions.

She has strong preferences for light colors, and in selecting her wardrobe has confined herself almost exclusively to delicate shades. A costume that Ma-cheret is making is of tan broadcloth, handsomely embroidered in silk braid of the same tint. An outer garment to be worn with it is of the Redington style, lined with pink shot silk and elaborately trimmed with sable. The hat, to match this suit is of a velvet crown, decorated with mercury wings and a stylish arrangement of Dresden ribbon and feathery aigrettes.

Half a dozen evening gowns are included in the outfit, while her morning dresses and negligee robes are very beautiful creations of pompadour silks, profusely trimmed with lace, and with some tulle. Some are made in Empire style, while other show a be-ribboned petticoat in Valenciennes lace through the opening of the front.

Narrow headings, with crepe satin ribbon, are extensively used in the lingerie, which is to be entirely white. The petticoats are of the umbrella shape, made with deep ruffles, which serve to hold up the bottom of the dress skirt. The one to be worn with the wedding gown will be of ivory brocade satin, trimmed with a succession of daintily striped ruffles, edged with lace, which will reach to the knee.

Of Miss Vanderbilt's jewels it has been stated that she will have a finer display of gems than any American girl who has contracted a titled marriage.

Lady William Beresford, the ex-duchess, has had duplicates made for Miss Constance of her famous set, which jewels are the admiration of the court circle abroad. Besides, Mrs. Wm. C. Vanderbilt is to bestow upon her daughter the famous Gavit collection of the 15th century jewels and stones, which cost the owner half a dozen moderate fortunes; added to these will be the Marlborough jewels, which the groom will supply, besides the magnificent bridal gifts that will greatly enhance the wealth in her jewel casket.

It is not yet known whether the wedding reception will be held at Mrs. Vanderbilt's new house at Seventy-second street and Madison avenue, or at the Graystone house in Fifth avenue; but no lavish expenditure will be spared to present the most resplendent appearance.

There will undoubtedly be two marriage ceremonies, one religious and the other civil, as great care has always been taken by the Duke of Marlborough to guard against any question of the validity of a marriage entered into by them.

Hon. L. H. Pelletier will replace Hon. Mr. Birtles in the Ottawa cabinet. The risk of electing him to the Commons will not be undertaken. He will be called to the Senate—a refuge in a time of need.

In a Pitiable Plight.

Mrs. Sinnett Stole So That She Might Go to Jail.

Did Not Want to Return Home With Her Husband—She Gets Six Months.

Clad in scanty raiment, with haggard face, and suffering greatly from cold and hunger, Mrs. Mary Sinnett, of 755 Simcoe street, almost begged of the police magistrate this morning to send her to jail. She was charged with stealing staves from the works of the London and Petroleum Barrel Company. Behind her in the box stood her husband, Edward Sinnett, none too well clad, but looking strong and healthy, and well able to work. He was also charged with stealing staves.

The Sinnett home on Simcoe street is small, and, according to Chief Williams, who has known the family for years, more like a pig pen than a human abode. The family has always been in destitute circumstances. The father was never too fond of work, but always had a liking for liquor. For some twelve years he has possessed a great love for chicken and turkey, belonging to other people, and his depredations have caused him to serve several terms. Of late he has been keeping out of the law's clutches.

Near the Sinnett house are the barrel works, where piles of lumber are left in the open all the year round. Late in the evening the Sinnetts were seen to go to the works, and the Sinnetts were caught last night and placed under arrest.

"They both pleaded guilty this morning, and the chief of police said the woman had committed the act in order that she might be sent to jail. She did not want to go back to her husband, who had threatened her only last week, while under the influence of liquor. There are four children—two girls aged 14 and 12 years, and two boys, aged 10 and 6 years.

"And you want to go to jail?" said the magistrate to the woman.

"Yes," said Mrs. Sinnett, "rather than go back to that house."

Asked what she thought would become of her children, Mrs. Sinnett broke down and wept for several minutes.

The magistrate was uncertain what to do at first, but when he found that two of the children were working, he considered a great difficulty removed, as the other two could be cared for by the charitable institutions.

"I will give each person six months," said the court; "Sinnett in the Central, Mrs. Sinnett in the common jail."

"But would rather go to the Central and let him go home," sobbed Mrs. Sinnett.

The magistrate informed her that her children would be cared for, and with her husband she went to the cells.

MR. LAURIER'S WAY.

(From the Toronto Star.)

Strength in political matters does not necessarily mean bulldog assertiveness; strength in meeting a grave crisis in the affairs of a state does not necessarily mean a pugilistic attitude backed up by a threat.

A strong statement at such a time will be calm and firm; he may be cold and hard, or he may meet the issue with a smile and a cheery confidence in himself, his country and his cause. He must be cool and firm, but he may approach the issue with the sunny ways of patriotism, asking the other side to be just and to be fair.

The time when the issue came before the Dominion Government to be dealt with finally was the time when the sunny ways of patriotism were needed. The Government did not try that way; it took the bulldog method, and the result is only too well known—failure.

Government papers say that Mr. Laurier's way would postpone the evil day and keep the country in a prolonged ferment; but has the Government's way done any better? Has not the Government's method kept the country in a prolonged ferment and has it not been a vassalizing, dictatorial policy?

Mr. Laurier has been a long time speaking, but he has spoken at last, and he has made his position very plain. He would have a commission investigate the facts, if the Manitoba schools were found to be Protestant, he would see that a change was made. In the sunny way of patriotism he would ask Mr. Greenway to make the change necessary to give justice to the minority, and if Mr. Greenway refused, Mr. Laurier would doubtless be firm enough to ask the Federal Parliament to provide remedial legislation. The difference between the ways of Mr. Laurier and the Government is that the Liberal leader demands for a remedy without ascertaining if there be a disease to remedy. As a result of the Government's way the matter stands just where it stood when the Government took it up, and in addition relations between the Dominion and the Province are strained. The sunny way would have created an amicable feeling on both sides, and a commission could before this time have learned all the facts. It is even possible that the sunny ways would have enabled the two sides to reach an amicable agreement.

A LIFE SAVED.—Mr. James Bryson Cameron, states: "I was confined to my bed with inflammation of the lungs, and was given up by physicians. A neighbor advised me to try Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, stating that his wife had used it for a throat trouble with the best results. Acting on this advice, I procured the medicine, and less than a half-bottle cured me; I certainly believe it saved my life. It was with reluctance that I consented to a trial, as I was reduced to such a state that I Marsh and forest fires are raging north and west of Green Bay, Wis.
