A DASTARDLY DEED! Attempt at Train-Wrecking on the L. and E. R. A. Presidential Escape.

A dastardly attempt was made last night at train-wrecking on the London and Port Stanley Railway. Pilot engine No. 702, in charge of J. Dean, of this city, had just finished helping a heavy freight train up the grade, and was returning to the station when the engine was struck in the rear by a passenger train.

—The locomotive struck two heavy steel rails laid across the track. They had been placed there in the brief interval—some twenty minutes—between the time the pilot engine passed the spot with the freight and the time it returned. It was not until the passenger train was on the occasion to slack up, because at the ordinary rate of speed the locomotive would have been derailed, with probably disastrous results. It was, it was not, that the train was derailed.

—It was inferred that the obstructions were placed there by a party who intended for the pilot engine and that the passenger train was derailed shortly after 8 p.m. The first train after that to go over the road would likely be the 6:40 a.m. mail train from this city to St. Thomas, or possibly a freight train at an earlier hour. Every effort will be made to detect the guilty parties.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA. Ovide Musin at the Grand on Saturday Night—Rhea To-Night.

MUSIN AT THE GRAND. A fine audience (for a Saturday night) greeted the renowned Ovide Musin and his concert company at the Grand Opera House.

—The singing of "The Song of the Sea" was particularly noteworthy. Her execution of Wagner's "Parsifal" was marvellous. For the latter he received a double encore, responding with familiar melodies, embellished with car-ticking variations. The singing of "The Song of the Sea" was particularly noteworthy.
