"It is still snowing, though not so heavily," he said. "Come on the verandah, and look at the landscape. The lake is a pool of link in the middle of a white tablecioth."

"The snow will be far more visible in the morning, and we have a lot of ice to melt here," interposed Mrs. de la Vere quickly.

This letter, joined to certain lurid statements made by Stampa, had induced Spencer to accept Mrs. de la Vere's invitation. Little as he cared to dine in Bower's company, it was due to Helen that he should not refuse. He was entangled neck and heels in a net of his own contriving. For very shame's sake, he could not wriggie out, leaving Helen in the toils.

FRENCH-CANADIANS IN SCHOOL PROTEST

A Resolution Passed at Ottawa Against Whitney's Bilingual Regulations.

Ottawa, Nov. 24. - About 1,000 young French-Canadians, the majority from the city, but a number from outside places, met in the Monument Nationale yesterday afternoon, listened to addresses and passed resolutions expressive of their protest against the new regulations of that Ontario Government in regard to bi-ingual schools. The meeting was in connection with a movement known as L'Association Catholique de la Jeunesse Canadienne Francaise, a new society of young men formed mainly to repre-sent the feeling of French-Canadian youth in regard to Ontario educational matters. The speakers were in the main young men, members of the

ROYAL PLUM PUDDINGS

Windsor Kitchens Making Them by Hundreds for Yuletide Gifts. London, Nov. 24.—The kitchens at Windsor Castle have been busy for the last three days making a vast number of Christmas puddings for home consumption, and also to be sents as presents to all members of royalty in Europe, who are per-sonal friends of the British monarch. This custom of cooking these puddings and sending them to kings, queens, princes, and princesses was always observed by Queen Victoria, and King Edward. A large consignment is always sent to Queen Maud of Norway, a sister of the King, and to the Czar and Crazina. Prince Arthur will take two specially large puddings to the Duke and Duchess Connaught in Canada when he sails early in December.
