Report of Judge Lammpan
Who Enquired Into Rumors of Graft Involving Police Board, Made Public

MAKES REFERENCE TO SOME EVIDENCE

Notes Lack of Inquisitiveness on Part of Police on Certain Occasions—No Acts of Bribery Established

The report of County Judge Lammpan, sitting as a royal commissioner to investigate the official conduct of the Victoria Police Board consisting of Mayor Morley and Commissioners Leonard Tait and H. F. Bishop, after consideration by the provincial executive, was made public yesterday. The commissioner examines and reviews at some length the evidence adduced in the course of the inquiry, and proceeds to the following terms as his finding in the following regard:

"No definite complaint was made against the commissioners or any of them, but it was constantly being asserted on the streets that money was being collected from professional gamblers both Chinese and white, and from the keepers of houses of prostitution, in return for protection, and the inference drawn from these alleged acts was that the commissioners were getting the better part of it, so collected; and in some instances so lively was the imagination, that the amount collected was definitely stated in dollars. These rumors became so general that the newspapers referred to the matter, and consequently the editor of the Times of March 12 and the West of March 10, and consequently the editor of these two papers, were called upon to issue a statement in which they asserted that their assertions were based only on what they had heard from other people, who also were relying on hearsay, and that they who had supplied information to the editors were subsequently called; but their evidence as to that part of it, the other witnesses, totally failed as showing that any one of the commissioners had been guilty of any wrongdoing."

No Unearned Increase

"Usually when a man comes into sudden wealth, such as rumor had it was finding its way into the pockets of some of these men, there is some outward manifestation of it. But there was not even a rumor that any of the commissioners had been spending money in any extraordinary way or indulging in any luxuries. None of them kept any regular book of accounts, but three of them kept bank accounts, and I had them produce their bank books, and they all accounted satisfactorily for the money they had banked, and they had received. The occupations followed by the three commissioners leave them no time to keep such accounts, and I think they were entirely correct, and they might use their positions to bring grief to the mill. Mayor Morley is engaged in no business, and he is a freight clerk in the employ of the Canadian Pacific Railway company in their office at the dock; and Mr. Tait is the manager of the Victoria Transfer company."

"As there was no evidence even tend- ing to show that the commissioners had been bribed, an investigation was made to ascertain if the members of the police force had been using their positions for the purpose of exacting money from any of the different classes of the public who make their living by questionable meth- ods. It was found that the police force had already mentioned. The result of this inquiry was very small."

Not Corroborated

"In 1908 Detective Clayards was watching the Chinese lottery and gaming houses and in the course of his rounds he kept visiting the houses, and he says that one night Tong Ork said to him: 'You no get a little bit?' and on his answering in the negative, he says Tong Ork said to him: 'No good.' At a subsequent time he says Tong Ork said to him: 'Only a little bit of gambling going on—you no need come round. I'll see you get a little bit.' Clayards says he never got or expected anything, and Tong Ork denies that he ever made the statements, and so far as I could dis- cover, Tong Ork never paid even a 'little bit.'"

Some years ago Clayards says he was watching W. R. Jackson to see if he was conducting a gaming house, and that Jackson met him and said: 'What is the matter with you, Clayards?' Clayards said, 'Nothing,' and Jackson then said, 'Isn't it all right?' 'I don't know what you mean,' said Clayards; and Jackson said, 'It ought to be; it goes up, and it goes down—you no need come round. I'll see you get a little bit.' Clayards says he never got or expected anything, and Tong Ork denies that he ever made the statements, and so far as I could dis- cover, Tong Ork never paid even a 'little bit.'"

"The lack of inquisitiveness displayed by the police when told of a bribe or when getting one seems remarkable. The Chinese doubting their feet hampered their operations because of frequent visits by the police, and I have no doubt a bribe could be obtained by a police- man on getting one, but that the superior officers are alert to the danger attending a policy of harassing in- quiry by the order issued on the 12th September, 1909, by Sergeant of Detectives Perdue, at the suggestion of In- spector Palmer."

"However, I was not asked to investi- gate the acts of the police, but of the police commissioner."

CANADIANS AFTER DIAMOND SCULLS

TORONTO, April 27.—Louis Scholes and Jimmy Cosgrave, the two local scullers who will represent Canada at the English Henley this year in an effort to win the Diamond Sculls for Canada, are both working very hard to get into the best possible shape before taking to the water. Scholes works out at the Varsity gym every morning, and is carrying less weight than he has for years at this time. Jimmy Cosgrave is lighter than he should be, and is not working too hard, as he will wait until he is able to get on the water before taking off any more flesh. Both of the Diamond Scull aspirants' shells, made by Simms of England, are in the hands of the scullers and certainly are a credit to the makers. They are about the same in length, with Scholes' weigh- ing a few pounds more than Cosgrave's. Neither has set in these shells yet, waiting for better weather.

Seeding Conditions

WINNIPEG, April 26.—Seeding con- ditions so far in western and central Canada have been very favorable.
