AS OTHERS SEE US.

The following extract from an American contemporary should make the average Canadian sit up and pat himself on the back, and think what a fine fellow he is. In the term "average Canadian," we do not include the slackers and others who are opposed to universal military service.

"When the world takes inventory of what Canada has done in the war, a great many American sceptics will be rudely shocked. So will a great many American optimists be mightily heartened. Canada has enlisted practically ten per cent of her population in the war—400,000 men for troops, and about 300,000 in munitions making, and incidental war-preparation activity. She has shipped overseas huge supplies of food to the British and French armies. She did all this voluntarily. In some of her provinces her people gave $18 per capita for patriotic purposes.

"Her first war production food campaign resulted in the greatest crop in history. She met the drain of men from her farms and industries without shock or disturbance to her economic stability. She went into the war owing $200,000,000, and after a little more than two years she had a credit balance of $300,000,000. While gaining these great ends, Canada made numerous mistakes and muddled a lot. She admits it. She has many acute problems now, both industrial and agricultural, war problems and after-the-war problems. But notwithstanding all she had done, she is now at the highest point in her systematic organization to meet the food crisis, to re-absorb tens of thousands of returning soldiers.

"All Canada's problems and achievements hit home to us with vital force and every patriotic American, farmer or otherwise, should study the record of what Canada has done already and what she is still doing. We have got to pull together for the salvation of New World Democracy, and if we under the Stars and Stripes can set our teeth to it in the way the Canadians have done, there need not be the slightest of doubt as to the outcome."

The St. John, N. B., Times said a few days since—

"It is now new experience for the Tory politicians in New Brunswick to be found guilty of acts which are not creditable to them. Indeed the province has had so many exposures of this sort in the last few years that the man who can read the record and still boast of his connection with the Tory party must have a political hide like unto the hide of a rhinoceros."

WOMAN'S THOUGHTLESSNESS

A discussion arose recently in regard to the practice of some ladies going to the larger cities to do their shopping or patronizing the mail order houses. One of the members of the group, while defending the ladies against any wrongful intent, stated that women did more harm through thoughtfulness than men did from deliberate malice. There seems to be considerable foundations for this contention, and certainly if our fair friends gave as much thought to the matter as they should, they would appreciate the far-reaching effects of their actions.

It is strange that women will give largely of their time, energy and money towards educational and charitable institutions, with a public spirit and disinterestedness that is highly commendable, and yet will thoughtlessly do their community sufficient harm to more than offset their good work in other directions. Yet it is true that many of the evils which these ladies work so assiduously to overcome, are directly traceable to this pernicious habit of dealing with mail order houses.

If there is poverty or distress, the ladies will bestir themselves. For the sake of sweet charity they will do wonders. They will organize bazaars and patronize them, paying ridiculous prices for things they do not want, or at least do not need. They will waste sufficient money in this way to buy many useful articles from our local merchants. If the same amount of vital force that was expended in these charitable schemes was directed in other channels, our whole community would be benefited, morally, physically and spiritually. We emphatically state that much of this charity is necessitated by the worse than foolish habit of discriminating against our own town and our own neighbors. Our friends can surely see that if the benefits of their purchases remained with the local merchants, these merchants would be in a better position to contribute to local institutions, and would also be better able to offer employment to many of the young people who have at present to seek other fields.

Putting the matter into plain language, the women who do not patronize the merchants of the town where their living is made, are blind to their own best interests. The fathers, brothers or husbands of these women are making their livelihoods here in Fredricton upon them, and if those of these men are forced out of employment on account of lack of business, mothers and sisters are apt to complain of things in general and this town in particular. How many of them will go into the matter sufficiently to realize that they themselves are partially responsible for the loss of business?

Each one of his article will give the matter careful thought and we hope there would be a very great improvement in local business conditions. Do not wait for some person else to act. Do your duty as you see it. Deal at Home—Daily Mail.

The Oshawa Reformer tells of the "startling statement" recently made by the manager of a big Toronto Mail Order House. He said: "We have a bureau whose duty it is to read the country paper. There is not a paper of any consequence in our territory we do not get. The bureau looks over these papers when we find a town where the merchants do not advertise in the local papers or where advertisements do not change their advertisements regularly we immediately flood that section with our catalogues and literature. It always brings results far in excess of the same effort put forth in territory where The Local Merchants Use The Local Papers."

THE CHANNEL TUNNEL.

One of the results of the war will probably be the construction of a tunnel under the English Channel between England and France. Already the project is being revived in the press, and what is looked upon, when first proposed, as a danger is now regarded as a safeguard. When last the question was considered by the military authorities nine years ago, British Government was considered by the military objections to the Channel tunnel were allowed to prevail over the strong commercial arguments in its favor. But great changes have since taken place since 1907. On the eve of the war the Times military correspondent, after a masterly analysis of the arguments for and against the tunnel declared that "the military objections to this country of a national army, sufficiently numerous and adequately trained." Now the national army is in existence and any peril of a military nature has been minimized. It is not altogether eliminated. It is probable that the danger from a military point of view was much exaggerated, and that with reasonable measures of precaution, the tunnel would be safe from a national standpoint. We can easily see what an advantage a tunnel under the Channel would be in the present war, where hundreds of thousands of soldiers and enormous quantities of supplies of all kinds have had to be transported through waters infested by German submarines and made dangerous by mines. With a line of communication with France secure, against torpedo boats the enemy might possess, could never deprive Britain of food and raw material. Half the food of the United Kingdom comes through the Mediterranean, and wheat and meat could be transported through France if proper arrangements were made and if the tunnel was built of sufficient dimensions to carry a large traffic. But even apart from any such precautions for war time, the advantages of a tunnel under the Channel for travel and commercial purposes are so great as to make the project very attractive. Some of these have been pointed out by a writer in the London Daily Mail. "The Tunnel," he says, "would give this country and its railways all the high-class passenger traffic from the Continent to the United States and also a large express traffic. There would be nothing to prevent non-stop trains from being run between London and Paris, and in another ten years electric traction will probably have been adopted on the lines between the two capitals. The construction of a tunnel would give Liverpool the superiority in the competition with Hamburg, which was growing fiercer with each year before the war. Geographically Liverpool has immense advantages, and lies much nearer to the United States. But so long as the risk of bad weather and intense discomfort, people on the Continent will prefer Hamburg, where, though the voyage is longer, they have their berth and comfortable accommodation all the way. Those who before the war have stood in some great Continental junction such as Bale of Munich or Cologne and watched the international trains pass through will understand how great would be the traffic which would quickly converge on London. The writer is confident that the tunnel is coming. Of that, he says, there can be no doubt, and he adds, "it should be begun the moment the close of the war sets free the necessary labor."

Dear Editor:—
Would you kindly allow space in your valuable paper for these few words I received your paper pretty often that is sent to me by a friend. Some time ago I saw in a certain paper how some old ladies tried to stop the rum and cigarettes of the boys at the front which I think is very mean. Although for myself I don't care for the former but the long and wet nights in the first trench speaks for itself. Would the said party or parties kindly correspond with the sender of this and let him know if she really cares for the welfare of the boys. If they think it's going to learn them bad habits they want to consult a mind specialist. Thanking you Mr. Editor.

I remain yours,

THE FRUIT CROP
Ottawa, June 1917.—There is not likely to be a particularly heavy crop of fruit in the Niagara Peninsula this year. Representatives of the Dominion Fruit Branch at Ottawa were through the district last week and have prepared the following report.
Peaches are a fairly good crop along the Niagara River and in the section in and around St. Catharines, but at Grimsby, Winona and Stoney Creek the crops are lighter and will probably be further reduced by "leaf curl" which is extremely prevalent there.
Pears, plums, and cherries have set for a good crop, and unless a heavy "drip" takes place within the next few weeks, the nearby markets will be well supplied with these fruits.
Apples are almost a failure in Niagara, and reports from other sections of Ontario indicate a light crop generally in the province.
Strawberries are light in the Clark-
