NAPOLEON UPON THE STAGE

A GORGEOUS PRODUCTION OF "MADAME SAUS GENE" AT THE ACADEMY.

The Comedy By Victorien Sardou Proves to Be a Delightful Work Delicately Produced Times and of the Court of the Empire.

"Madame Sans Gene," presented at the Grand last night, is a production of which one can speak in terms of almost unqualified admiration. It has already been heralded abroad as the work of Victorien Sardou, who had for his collaborator Emile Moreau. Sardou is the most successful playwright who ever lived, from a box-office standpoint, and in "Madame Sans Gene" he has put forth what will perhaps be his most enduring work. In Mr. Augustus Pito's presentation of the drama, the sumptuousness of the scenery, the costuming and the accessories are along the lines set down by Henry Irving, and quite equal in richness to any of his productions. Apart from its merits as a play—and they are notable—"Madame Sans Gene" commands attention as a spectacle, and, as is apt to be the case in the acting of some of the actors of the Academy.

A Vivid Spectacle.
The spectacle has two aspects. First there is a picture of Paris in the heat of revolutionary times, as it appeared on August 10, 1792, when the last blow to the Bourbons was dealt. The picture is vivid and full of life; cannonading, love-making, wine drinking and death go on and make up a sort of a joyful chaos. With unusual skill Sardou has shown us all the factors in the picture, from the centre of Catherine Zuberche's laundry in the Rue Saint-Anne.

The second part of the spectacle is as vivid and more deliberate. The Court of Napoleon at the zenith of his power is, indeed, a sumptuous picture. A dynasty has been evolved from anarchy. The same emulates and the rank and file of '89 are dukes and duchesses; there is a shaming of artificiality over all the women are in the glorious Empire gowns; the men are brilliant in gold and lace; they move about amid a carefully elaborated luxury; there is a beautiful surface to all things with immorality and conspiracy and kicking and spite lurking below.

A generous manager has realized the brilliant ideas of the author in the most effective manner.

As to the Story.
The plot of "Madame Sans Gene" has already been published in several quarters. It is partly a drama of intrigue according to the old Sardou formula and partly a drama of character, which is not a la Sardou in a general sense. The intrigue turns on Napoleon's jealousy of his Empress Marie Louise and the victim is Count De Neipperg. History tells us that in later years she became the Count's mistress; in the drama, however, she is in 1811 as innocent, though compromised. Neipperg is the romantic figure of the piece and he comes nearly being shot, and he is only saved by the sudden discovery of the Empress' infidelity near the close of the play. With the technical cleverness of which he alone is master Sardou, tells his story without bringing Marie Louise on the stage.

The beautiful and enduring part of "Madame Sans Gene" is the story of the woman who gives the drama its title. In her is a potent figure as Fuchs, the Minister of Police, or the Emperor Napoleon; she is a lovable, humorous, delightful figure, who entirely overshadows them as a character. As Catherine Zuberche, the laundress, she is a mirthful, kind, hearted, devil-may-care girl. Later, when through all the tortuous changes of revolutionary times, she finally becomes Duchess of Dantzig, Maréchale LeFebvre and figures prominently in the court of Napoleon, she is still the lovable woman of the laundry; beautiful, pure, generous in a pinch and an immortal court. Her generous, her strong, her audacious contempt for the gorging meanness about her, her suave Napoleon, that he commands her husband to divorce her, but her humor, her shrewd good sense and her enthusiastic championship of the heroic elements, that have come to the making of the Empire, win the Emperor finally to a generous appreciation of her virtues. The part was written for Madame Beland, an artist simply the cleverest woman in the world, and just as La Tosca was made for Bernhardt, it was intended to "scop" her out in Sardou's phrase, to give range to every atom her talent. Madame Beland is the embodiment of all the graces of the Parisienne, and Miss Kathryn Kidder, who plays the role at the Grand, is not. But the American woman's performance is in most of its elements delicious.

Miss Kidder's Acting.
She is an actress new to Toronto, tall and most divinely fair, with a certain tremulous femininity about her that is most engaging. In emotional passages she is at her best, her voice being a splendid one for such expression, and she is a fair comedienne besides, with a clear, signant way of saying the innumerable good things that fall to her. She was splendid in the speech when the proposition of divorce is put to her, and her love for her husband of eighteen years bursts out in a torrent of words. The humor with which she handled over the old unpaid washbill to Napoleon was delicious. There are scenes in which her vigor and enthusiasm come to the fore, and then she is full of fire; but the one or two farcical scenes awarded her lacked distinctness of treatment to some extent. Perhaps there is no other role in existence that calls for such versatility, and Miss Kidder has won her spurs with it.

The role of Napoleon is subsidiary but effective, and done by Mr. Augustus Pito. Cook with force and discretion. The make-up was splendid. Mr. Harold Russell, as the husband of "Madame Sans Gene," acted with feeling and distinction; Mr. Wallace Shaw as Fuchs, Mr. James K. Hackett as Neipperg, and Miss Marie Stewart as Queen Caroline were commendable. It is needless to say that the gowns of the ladies are surpassingly fine. "Madame Sans Gene" has been anonymously translated into English that is strong and colloquial, even if there is an anachronism about the slang. Perhaps the humor of the author's effect could not be expressed without this insignificant defect. The play is here for the whole week.

A Good Show at the Academy.
"The Police Patrol" is the attraction at the Academy this week. Yesterday fair audiences greeted the production, and to judge from the liberal applause accorded the members of the company those present were well pleased with the performance. The play abounds in original scenes. Charles Chappelle, as Captain Haply, an officer of the police; Harry E. Adams, an old Southern dandy; Eddie Green, as Spitters, a newsboy, and his wife, Miss Blanche Boyer (figure, as a sweetie, who by the way are Canadians) all assumed their different parts in an acceptable manner. Mrs. Giguere's dancing being worthy of special mention. In the fourth act a realistic scene occurs, being the ringing for the police patrol, when the celebrated actresses are brought on the stage and a prisoner driven off to the station. The horses are seen standing in their stalls in the police bars, and when the alarm sounds they make for the swinging harness, and are "hooked up" in the most natural manner. The Academy should draw large crowds this week.

"The Trolley System"
"The Trolley System," a farce comedy, held the boards at Jacobs & Sparrow's Opera House last night, playing to a large house. The piece is replete with fun, singing and dancing. The leading role was taken by Jay Hunt as John Hope, etc. The part is that of an old man, and was very well filled by J. Hunt. The Gammels furnished most of the fun, keeping it up from beginning to end. Robert Gammels, who takes the part of a mischievous boy, proved himself an excellent dancer and tumbler. Miss Minnie Bell and Miss Maud Harris are both very good singers; the latter gave several skirt dances. A feature of the show was the introduction towards the end of a trolley car actually carrying passengers and which towards the end blows up. "The Trolley System" will be in Toronto all week.

Varsity Glee Club Concert.
The concert to be given by the Varsity Glee Club on Friday evening, Dec. 14, promises to be one of the finest of the season. The two main attractions are Mrs. Clara Barnes Holmes, the handsome contralto of Buffalo, and Miss Evelyn De Laus Street, violinist, one of the most prominent lady virtuosos. Miss Street has delighted Toronto audiences before. The Ladies' Glee Club of fifty voices, under Miss Norma Reynolds; the Banjo and Guitar Club and the Mandolin Club, under Mr. George F. Smedley, and the University Glee Club of 50 voices, under Walter H. Robinson, will surprise any past concertgoers hitherto made by them.

Max O'Reill.
An immense audience that went away thoroughly delighted attended the Massey Music Hall last evening, to hear Max O'Reill's latest lecture, entitled "The Fables of John Bull, Sam and Pat." For two hours the witty Frenchman entertained his listeners with the characteristics of the three nations as they have appeared to him during many years' study, in which time he has travelled the world over and had opposing views of judging them not only in their native ideas, but in every British possession on the globe. It was apparent to all who heard him that the eminent lecturer is a shrewd observer of men and things, and is not only a keen and witty and brilliantly of the characteristics, good and bad, of those whom he has met, but can also speak of them with certainty and with the utmost good nature. Prof. Clark of Trinity College acted as chairman.

Liederkrans Concert and Ball.
A grand concert and ball, the first of the season, was held last night by the Ladies' Bowling Club of the Liederkrans. The club house was tastefully decorated and the 700 people who attended enjoyed themselves fully. After the concert there was a good program of dances and the merry revellers kept up the fun until an early hour this morning.

At the rehearsal of Signor Leonardo Vagan's chorus last evening at the Grand, the efficiency of the high appreciation of the members of his successful work as director of the oratorio, Samson, was well displayed, and a rich musical treat in its store for those who attend this musical evening Thursday evening next. The plan shows a good sale of seats and is being rapidly filled.

"Heads" Concert.
Miss Katherine Fleming, the contralto who sings with the festival chorus on the 12th, is a western girl who came all the way from Los Angeles to conquer New York. Her first engagement was as contralto in the Masonic-avenue Baptist Church, where Homer Bartlett, the composer, is organist. Musical people say that her voice suggests that of Scotch, while others say that it is like Anna Louise Cary's. It is so full, so firm, so mellow, so filled with nervous force and magnetic buoyancy, as to seem at times disproportionate to the little frame from which it comes. As an artist she is an enthusiast and does not spare herself. In the Messiah performance musical people can expect to hear Handel's masterpiece rendered as it has never been before in Toronto. The list for subscribers is now open at Messrs. Nordheimers.

Ignalis in Coming.
Ex-Senator John J. Ignalis, the great Kansas orator, and one of the most brilliant men of our times, is announced for the Pavilion on Dec. 13 in "Anarchy and Plutocracy." In answer to numerous enquiries regarding tickets it may be stated that the plan will open at Nordheimers' next Thursday at 10 a.m.

Cannot Get Information.
Washington, Dec. 3.—Officials of the State Department, who at first placed no reliance whatever in the reports of massacred Armenians in Asiatic Turkey are now disposed to attach some significance to the lack of information obtainable by American diplomatic and consular agents in Turkey, who have had orders for over 10 days to investigate and report upon the matter, and whose despatches indicate that obstacles are being placed in their way by the Turkish authorities. It is claimed at the State Department that the American Legation at Constantinople has sent no information regarding the alleged outrages.

Col. Tyrwhitt Injured.
Bradford, Ont., Dec. 3.—While grooming his horse yesterday morning, Lieut. Col. Tyrwhitt, M.P. for South Simcoe, was kicked by the brute on the head, cheek, body and thigh. Although badly bruised, it is not anticipated that any of the wounds will prove of a serious character.

Harrows From His Buggy to Death.
Napawan, Dec. 3.—George D. Dettor, an old resident of Napawan, was thrown from his buggy this afternoon, and died almost immediately. His horse became frightened and ran away, overturning the carriage. Mr. Dettor was 70 years old.

Berlin, Ont., Dec. 3.—Alexander Willoughby was viciously attacked about 11 o'clock Saturday night, in company with Mr. Stepler, cigar-maker, the two were on their way home, when they were attacked by two men, and Mr. Willoughby was stabbed behind the ear and in the jaw.

Strikers Lose $50.
Ottawa, Dec. 3.—The cabinet has finally disposed of the case of the striking postoffice clerks at Victoria, B.C. It will be remembered that they went on strike because they were offered $10 each per month, for increased cost of living in that province voted to them several weeks being paid. They were only out for a few days.
