children; they are the women who want a good time. The story of their lives is one of sadness. It's a long, tireless round of whist parties and dances, while home and husband are neglected. It's the theatre night after night and the late return which finds them weary and without interest in life. Such women do not know the meaning of a woman's best nature. They know not why it is that God has given them a pair of hands. It is in order that they may have an opportunity of helping God to guide the little feet into the paths of righteousness. They have never known the cooing of a little child, the voice of an angel's song.

What will become of these childless women in future days? The day will come when the husband is dead and they are left in lonely widowhood. I saw a beautiful picture in a well-known hotel the other day. An old lady sat by the window contentedly knitting, when suddenly a young man of perhaps thirty years rushed up and threw his arms around her neck and said, 'Mother.' It was her son, grown up now and married, but always her 'boy.' Her husband has been dead for many years, but she finds in their son a new life and a new inspiration. Because he lives, the closing days of life have been made bright and happy for her.

great number of divorces is due to the decay of home ties, because in so many homes there are no children. There is no perfect union unless it be blessed by a birth. The security of the home lies in the coming into it of little ones who will bind husband and wife closer together and raise up new and powerful interests beside which their differences sink into insignificance.
