Winnipeg's Jubilee.

A MILITARY demonstration in honor of Her Majesty's jubilee took place at Winnipeg on Friday last, that day being set apart by the Lieut.-Gov. as a holiday for the celebration in the Province of Manitoba. First on the programme was the inspection of the 90th Rifles of Canada under command of Lieut.-Col. Boswell, by Lieut.-Col. Houghton, D.A.G. Military District No. 10, which took place at the drill hall at 8 a.m. The inspecting officer was received with the usual general salute, and after the regiment shouldered arms he made a minute inspection of the arms, accoutrements and clothing. The regiment then broke into column and the muster roll was called, which showed a total strength present of all ranks of 306; although the number allowed to draw pay for drill was only 268. The band was composed of 28; there were also a bugle band of 13 and an ambulance corps of 13. The D. A. G. highly complimented the regiment on their appearance and general efficiency. Although they have been promised their new equipment for some time, it had not arrived in time for the inspection, and the regiment could only turn out in review order. Even then to make a creditable appearance the regiment had to purchase a number of waist belts to replace those lost and worn out on active service. After the inspection the regiment marched to the brigade parade ground and took their place on the left, the Mounted Infantry and the 91st being on their right. The troops were formed up in a line of quarter-column with the Winnipeg field battery on the left. The brigade was deployed into line, the ranks opened and a feu-de-joie was fired, the Winnipeg field battery firing the usual seven rounds alternate with each round of the infantry. The brigade then shouldered arms and gave a royal salute, with the usual three cheers for Her Majesty. The ranks being closed quarter-column was formed on the right companies of the different battalions. The brigade then wheeled into position for marching past. The cavalry under command of Capt Knight and artillery under command of Major Coutlee passed at the walk; next came the Mounted Infantry on foot in four divisions in single rank under the command of Major Buchan; then followed the 91st in column under command of Major Thibadeau, and lastly the 90th Rifles in column with their ambulance in rear, under command of Lieut.-Col. Boswell. Ranks were then changed and the infantry and rifles marched past in quarter-column, ranks were again changed and the cavalry and artillery went past at "the trot;" then came the infantry and rifles at the double. The brigade then formed up on their original ground in quarter-column and advanced in review order. The marching past in column of the Mounted Infantry and the 90th won the plaudits of the spectators, while the 90th were credited with beating everything on the field at the double. The marching past of the cavalry and artillery at the walk and trot was also very good.

THE SHAM FIGHT, which took place at the conclusion of the march past, caused a great deal of excitement, and in this feature of the programme the greatest public interest seemed to be taken. The campaign was first opened by an attack on Broadway bridge, which was supposed to be in the hands of an enemy. The cavalry acted as scouts and on discovering the enemy gave the signal, which brought up the 90th in skirmishing order, attacking the enemy and driving them back until the bridge was reached, when they extended along the river back and kept up a heavy fire. In the meantime two guns from the battery had taken up positions on either flank of the 90th, and kept up a heavy cannonading. The school of infantry came up after the 90th, clearing the enemy on the bridge and capturing the position. They then extended along the river bank on the St. Boniface side and fired several volleys. The 91st, which had been held in reserve, was marched to the bridge and employed in volley firing, the cavalry supporting the artillery. About half-past eleven the demonstration was finished, and on the whole was considered to be a great success.

The strength of the different corps was: 90th—A Co., 46; B Co., 41; C Co., 44; D Co., 40; E Co., 43; F Co., 40; band, 28; bugle band, 12; ambulance, 12—total, 306, besides 26 officers. 91st—80 men. School of Infantry, 80. Cavalry, 20. Field Battery, 72. Making a grand total of 558 men, besides the officers, of whom there were over 50. The brigade was under the command of Lt.-Col. Houghton, with Lt.-Col. Taylor as chief of staff and acting as brigade major. The others on the staff were Lieut. Brophy and Lieut. Chambre.
