These days the pharmaceutical industry can locate its discovery research anywhere in the world. This is both an opportunity and a threat for Canada. We have an international reputation as the best health care system in the world ... Bill C-91 [Amendments to the Patent Act] is a cornerstone of Canada's ability to become a major player in the international drug industry. It is time for the opponents of Bill C-91 to stop distorting the facts ... [and] for Canada to join the rest of the industrialized world in protecting creativity and innovation. It is time for this House to pass this legislation.

An Address by the Honourable Michael Wilson, Minister of Industry, Science and Technology and Minister for International Trade, to the House of Commons on Third Reading of Bill C-91, Amendments to the Patent Act, (Ottawa, Ontario, December 10, 1992, No. 92/59, As Delivered).

Whether or not Canadian troops remain in Cyprus, Greek and Turkish Cypriots bear the ultimate responsibility for resolving the dispute. But it appears that, instead of taking advantage of the peace and order that the UN mission has afforded, some political leaders have used the presence of UN forces to avoid making difficult choices, to avoid making the compromises required to ensure peaceful co-existence. At a time when there are increasing demands for peacekeeping around the world, we must ensure that we establish our priorities carefully, and manage our resources and contributions effectively. Mr. Speaker, in deciding to withdraw our troops, we are not saying that the United Nations should put an end to its peacekeeping mission in Cyprus. That is a matter for the Security Council, the Secretary-General, and the parties involved to consider. With over 4,000 troops participating in peace missions from Cambodia to Bosnia, from Croatia to Central America and the Middle East, the words "Canada" and "peacekeeping" will always be closely associated in the eyes of Canadians and in the eyes of the world.

An Address by the Honourable Mary Collins, Associate Minister of Defence, on behalf of the Honourable Barbara McDougall, Secretary of State for External Affairs, in the House of Commons, on Canada's Participation in the UN Peacekeeping Mission in Cyprus (Ottawa, Ontario, December 11, 1992, No. 92/60, Check Against Delivery).
