1757.

k is the it I give; to your vn gratinto quaruit vourdence in vas fuch. ved; the out, and were ani-

; and of

be con-

ding the he attack n of the e the left as going ral, who to take and espe-Never-

, except rched to rding to he Prusgrounds.

They The nents of n. But they they were driven back after a few discharges; and A. D. purfued with great spirit for a considerable time, till they found an opportunity of rallying upon an eminence; where they made a stand, but were fo feverely handled by the victorious pursuers that they betook themselves to flight in the greatest disorder, at about four in the afternoon.

. Whilst the cavalry performed wonders, the infantry opened themselves. The enemy cannonaded them briskly during this interval, and did fome execution; but not with impunity, the Prussian artillery returning the loss with advantage. This prelude of cannonade having continued without intermission for a quarter of an hour, the fire of the infantry began with such activity that the enemy could not fland it, nor relift the valour of the foot, who marched up gallantly to the enemy's batteries, and carried them with an uncommon bravery, one after another, till the enemy was forced to give way in great confusion. As the left wing advanced, the right changed its pofition, and having foon met with a fmall rifing ground, they availed themselves of its situation. by planting it with 16 pieces of heavy cannon. From hence they were enabled to fire upon the enemy's right, which increased their disorder, and excessively galled their left wing in front.

At five victory declared in favour of the Pruf- The Prufsians. The cannon ceased. The enemy fled on fians victorious. all sides. Only six battalions of the Prussian left The Impewere engaged. The pursuit was eager: but night rialists fly, coming on very fast favoured the runaways, and prevented