

People of the Order, and the other Rivers that augment its Stream, viz. Picardy, Normandy, the Isles of France and Campaigne, adjoining towards the middle to the Loire, Orlenoise, Britagne, Burgundy, and Lionoise; and the other Four towards the South, near the Garonne, viz. Dauphin, Guienne, Lauguedock and Provence; and under the Orlenoise are contained Maine, Perche and Beauce: on the higher side of the Loire, Neuvonois, Anjou and Touraine; and above this River beyond Poslou, Berrey, and Burgundy, hath Brest, and under Lionoise, are comprehended Lionois, Auvergne, Burbounois, and Marche; under Guienne is Bearne, Gascogne, and Guienne, Saintogne, Perigort, Limosin, Querci, and Roverme; and under Languedock is found Cevenes.

The chief Cities are, 1. Paris, situate in the Isle of France, anciently called Lutetia, by reason of the Clayenefs of the Ground about it; which for Riches, Statelines of Building, the many Magnificent Pallaces and Churches, that every where adorne it, and the Fruitfulness of the Soil about it, and number of its Inhabitants, may compare with most in Europe. 2. Lions, or Lugdunum. 3. Orleans. 4. Bullagne, taken by Henry the Eighth of England 1544. 5. Amiens. 6. St. Quintiens, where the English Forces under the Command of the Earl of Pembrook, in the Quarrel of Philip the Second of Spain, overthrew the French, Anno 1557. 7. Burdeaux. 8. Roane or Rovenysenlis. 10. Rhemes. 11. Claremont. 12. Tholouse. 13. Calais, which being taken by Edward the 3 of England, remained in the hands of the English 220 Years, and was lost in the reign of Queen Mary, soon after the Battle of St. Quintines, and the occasion, as many conjecture of hastning her end, she giving out, That if she were opened when dead, they might find Calais written on her Heart, &c. Many other Cities and Towns there are of note, whose names for brevities sake I must omit.
