truct.*-He was rejoieed to know that sueh despised sufferers, however degraded, had fornd compassion in other breasts besides his own. Had these unfortunate out-casts from socicty, been favoured from the first discovery of their country by Europeans, with inquisitive, learned and disinterested historians, who would have represented them and their cause fully and fairly to posterity, they would have been considered in a vory different point of light, from that in which they now appear. That some of their established customs and especialIy their manner of carrying on war, must appear exceedingly barbarous, and even brutal at the present day, to civilized people, the writer cannot doubt, yet if compared with the conduct of the civilized nations of Europe, Asia and Africa, in ten thousand instances, the balance would be greatly in their favour. $\dagger$ Indeed it is an extraordinary faet, that in all the wars in this country between the English and FrenclSpaniards and Americans, every one in their turn, have uniformly exerted every nerve to engage the Indians to take part with them, and $a$ fight in their own way, on their side. And thuse who make the greatest ely against their barbari-

    + Plutareh in his Morals, 1 vol. 96, says that the Lacedemonians murdered their children who were deformed or had a bud constitution.
    The Romans were allowed by Romulus to destroy all their female ehildren, except the eldest. Human sacrifices were offered up in almost all the eastern countries.
    Chikhen were burnt alive by their own parents, and offered to Daal, Moloch, and other pretemled deities. Mr. Hume says in his Essay on Politieal Science; "the most illustrious period of the Roman history considered, iu a political view, is that between the begiming of the firstand the end of the last punic war; yet at this very time, the horrid practiee of poisoning was so common, that during part of a season, a pretor punished capitally, for this crime, above three thousind persons in a part of (enlightenell) Italy, and found informations of this nature still multiplying.
