

Steamship Prince George.

One of the Dominion Atlantic Railway Company's magnificent steamers ready to leave Boston, Mass., for Yarmouth, Nova Scotia. There are several desirable routes by which the Annapolis Valley can be reached from the United States and Canada west, but none more convenient or comfortable than the above, especially for the people of New England or Southern States. This company now owns six steamships equal in comfort, safety, speed and elegance of interior finish to any of the trans-Atlantic liners. Another very desirable route is by way of the Grand Trunk Railway to Montreal or Quebec, then by Intercolonial Railway to St. Johns, New Brunswick, and steamer Rupert to Digby; or if you prefer an all-rail route continue on from Moncton via Intercolonial Railway to Halifax and from there to Yarmouth via Dominion Atlantic Railway.
