REVOLUTIONISTS TAKE TWO IMPORTANT TOWNS

Leader addresses as "My Dear Master," is published. General Li justifies his action in joining the rebels on the ground that when the rebels broke out his own troops were about to be tempted to escape, but was captured and forced to take command. Since then, he says, he has found all the men of his own troops to be the lowest of one mind and thinks it better to belong to a united than a disunited party.

TALKS ON CIVIC ART

These Mawson Will Give Notable Series of Lectures.

A special effort is being made to secure a large attendance at the course of lectures on civic art and city planning, to be given, week after week, in University Convocation Hall, by Thomas Mawson, the most eminent landscape architect in England.

At a conference of representatives of the civic guild, the board of trade and the playgrounds' association, held at the Falconer yesterday it was decided that the board of trade would give special attention to the Wednesday evening meeting, when the subject will be street planning.

Mr. S. G. Goulay, president of the board, will preside.

The playgrounds' association is also keenly alive to the benefits which the city may derive from such a course of lectures.

Mr. Mawson is reputed by those who have heard him to be a brilliant lecturer upon the subjects in regard to which he is an expert. There are six lectures in the course, one for each evening of the week, commencing Monday, Nov. 6, as follows:

Monday: City Building. The ideal and the first principles of city planning.

Tuesday: The Civic Survey, and the preparation of data upon which to found a plan.

Wednesday: Street Planning, with special reference to traffic problems incident to manufacturing, commercial and residential areas.

Thursday: Park Systems, including town gardens, playgrounds, public parks, reservations and boulevards.

Friday: The equipment of streets, parks, gardens for utility and adornment, and the housing of the industrial classes.

Saturday: Model suburbs and villages.

This is not the first aerial post by a man many years. In 1881 balloons ran for rather few, or is it drifted for about four months between Metz and Paris and during the siege of Paris the mail bags were conveyed to Tours by balloon. In 1881, too, our own post office made a successful experiment with a postal balloon at the Crystal Palace—London Chronicle.

Vegetable Whitehead in Uruguay

When traveling into the interior of Uruguay one's attention is attracted to the fine white color of the farm buildings, even during the winter season. To obtain this neat effect a white wash is used which is made with the ashed leaves of the common cactus, macerated in water for twenty-four hours, producing a solid, creamy substance, to the line is added and well mixed. When applied to any surface, be it of wood, brick, iron or other material, a beautiful pearly white appearance is produced, which will endure thru storms and frosts for many years.

What She Died of

Lucresia Borgia considered herself uncommonly expert in detecting vegetable poisons.

Having resolved upon giving a family dinner party she went out into the fields, and along by the purling brook, and gathered, as she supposed enough toadstools to poison a regiment.

But, alas, her boasted knowledge was the usual sham, and that night she fed her guests on a peck of the finest mushrooms they ever tasted.

Lucresia waited around several days for the mortuary returns to come in, and then took to her bed and died of "ingrowing chagrin"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The Food Question.

It seems improbable that Turkey has declared grain contraband of war, although reports to that effect are common and seem to come from Baltic ports, where the attitude of Turkey would be early known. If the Turks take such action they will interfere with all grain shipments to Western Europe, particularly England. The English have long been considered the food question in war—Providence Journal.

CANADIANS IMPERIALISTS SAYS EARL GREY

out of place to give expression to any individual views upon subjects of controversy.

"I can say, however, with the greatest confidence that, with the exception of an occasional crank here or there, it is impossible to find an autochthonous Canadian who, notwithstanding some desire to the contrary, there is no expectation in Canada that the recent Canadian election should be used for inducing any change into interests of the United Kingdom. It cannot be too clearly understood that Canadians are as adverse to the idea of interfering in your local affairs as they are to any interference on your part in the affairs of the United Kingdom. The self-governing dominions may collect revenue, requiring them to fulfill not only national but imperial obligations, is regarded by Canadians as a local matter, within the sole jurisdiction of the dominion, and they do not wish to interfere with the desire of the people of the United Kingdom to raise revenue in such way as may seem best to them."

Talks Politics.

Earl Grey, proceeding, said that the relation of Canada to the empire was contained in Laurier's words that the twentieth century belonged to the United States and in a growing sense across an Ottawa street on the arrival of the Duke of Connaught: "The Empire is the country, and the country is the home."

Continuing, Earl Grey said:

"As justice to Laurier, my affection and admiration for that distinguished statesman require me to say he and his government were not in the least responsible for the policy they adopted at the polls. Laurier was fully persuaded that his policy, if adopted, would strengthen both Canada and the crown. To secure free entry for the products of the farm and the forest, and to secure a market for nearly one hundred millions of the purchase of reciprocal admission to products from the U. S. A. would have been an agricultural implements, which had been energetically demanded by the agricultural interest, and which he was bound to accept for his country when unexpected opportunity placed it within his reach. It was certainly in no sense a policy of dislike to closer connection with the mother country."

Canada Scented Danger.

"The people of Canada, however, snuffed a great deal in these proposals. They were rightly or wrongly, it is not for me to say. Thousands of Liberals feared their political life would be snuffed out by the U. S. A. recollections of past hard treatment suffered from the U. S. A. and the prospect of a loss of national identity of the Dominion, all combined to strengthen the national resolve to vote against a policy which, however advantageous to their material interests, was one in which they scented possible danger to their fiscal independence and national autonomy."

"Canadians have shown that love of their country is superior to every other consideration, thereby justifying their belief in the empire and their coming great use. To those who would have the Canadian people as I know them the revelation afforded by the recent election of the strength and national sentiment of Canada must have been most welcome. It did not, however, require the revelation of the recent election of the strength and national sentiment of Canada to convince these already acquainted with the history and character of her people, and their attachment to her national institutions and the connection with the empire is far too deeply seated to be destroyed."

Refers to Nationalists.

"Let it be clearly understood that the Canadian people are not in sympathy with any form of imperialism which involves the idea of the subjugation of a self-governing people to an authority outside of their own control. The idea of jingo aggressiveness or urgent refusal of the rights of others, but now that it is brought to the attention of the Canadian people as I know them the revelation afforded by the recent election of the strength and national sentiment of Canada must have been most welcome. It did not, however, require the revelation of the recent election of the strength and national sentiment of Canada to convince these already acquainted with the history and character of her people, and their attachment to her national institutions and the connection with the empire is far too deeply seated to be destroyed."

Quebec Gains by Navy.

"From the point of self interest there are none other than inhabitants of Quebec who stand to gain more from our naval supremacy. There is on part of the world where the Roman church and the British Empire are guaranteed to Quebec by the British North America Act. All of these great free, independent, self-governing dominions of the British Empire were secured to the Roman Catholics of Quebec by the British Navy."

"I am not a politician, but I am an earnest appeal to his distinguished audience to make it a point of honor to visit Canada. Believe me, it is absolutely impossible, however vivid your imagination, to understand Canada by remaining outside of the Atlantic. I am satisfied just as in the case of Canadians visiting the United Kingdom, so in the case of Englishmen visiting the Dominion, all will go back proder than ever of the British citizenship, more confident of its bright and glorious future."

EX-ALDERMEN TESTIFY AS TO DEAL WITH LENNOX

Understanding as to Renumeration Was Slightly Cloudy—Cross-Examination Ends.

Corporation Counsel Drayton yesterday completed his cross-examination of E. J. Lennox in the famous suit over the erection of the city hall, Mr. K. Cowan, K.C., counsel for the architect, hopes to have the whole of the evidence in substantiation of Mr. Lennox's claim in by this evening.

Yesterday's attack was mainly against Mr. Lennox's statements as to his services in connection with the completion of the Elliott and Neelon contract.

The builder's risks were pointed out, and architect admitted that he did not have to run those risks, although he was charging the builder's rate for his services.

In answer to a question as to whether he had ever done builder's work before, Mr. Lennox stated that he had completed Bond-street Congregational and Erie-street Methodist Churches, but admitted that he had not conducted operations as a builder in connection with the work. He admitted that to complete the Elliott and Neelon contract was a difficult work and required experience.

Didn't Invite Tenders.

"So in spite of that you simply engaged yourself to do the work and did not have others tender on it at a possibly cheaper rate?" asked Mr. Drayton.

"I did," admitted the witness, and Mr. Drayton commented on his claim that he had acted as a trustee for the city.

The Bennett and Wright Company's connection with the letting of the elevator contract was again discussed. A letter to the witness with a signature thru which heavy pen strokes had been drawn, making it almost illegible, was produced.

Did you Ink out that signature?

asked counsel.

Mr. Lennox replied in an emphatic negative.

Mr. Drayton strove to show by holding it up to the light that it was from the Bennett and Wright Co. with a written signature, "Leitch," beneath the firm name.

Mr. Lennox did not deny admitting that he might have received it. A copy of the letter was produced from the Bennett and Wright letter book.

Do you still swear that you did not know Bennett and Wright were the tenderers on the Elliott and Neelon elevators?

asked Mr. Drayton.

The witness did not know.

Mr. K. Cowan now began to re-examine the witness.

As to the loans from Mr. Wright, Mr. Lennox stated that his solicitor at the time of the Neelon suit had advised him to put his personal out of reach when the suit for $300,000 began against the architect and the city for taking over the work. Mr. Wright had held the Dominion Radiator and Commercial Cable stocks for him. The plumbing contracts were let before that time.

In regard to the elevator contracts, Mr. Lennox stated that Leitch and Turnbull had taken the whole contract, but had sublet the installation of the pumps to Bennett and Wright. He did not know this until after the contract was given.

Held Radiator Stock.

In letting the contract for radiators Mr. Lennox's holding of stock was brought up. He stated that he found the Dominion radiator best, but had given half the contract to the people. The committee finally decided to give the entire contract to the Dominion Radiator Company as the most advanced radiator.

"Did you ever in any way assist a contractor in such a way as to help him to get a contract?" asked Mr. Cowan.

Never.

emphatically replied the witness. "I may have gotten information from contractors, but I never aided anyone to secure a contract."

Ex-Alderman O. B. Sheppard entered the box when the witness testified in the afternoon. He stated that while the furniture in connection with the city hall was purchased and paid for by the city, Mr. Lennox had to look after all the work. He had supplied the plans.

Didn't Know of Contract.

Mr. Sheppard, replying to a question, admitted that the subject of extra pay for Mr. Lennox might have been before the committee in a conventional way. His remembrance was often discussed by the aldermen.

"I didn't understand, however, that he had a contract outside his contract as architect," he stated.

"No amount was ever discussed?" asked Mr. Cowan.

Mr. Sheppard replied that it was always wondered what he would be paid for taking the job out of the contractor's hands and supervising the erection himself. He thought that Mr. Lennox or any other alderman would present a bill. Alderman Lamb had asked him, and he had replied that he would present one.

Counsel Drayton opened a cross-examination.

"So there never was any agreement as to extra charges?" he asked.

"Not that I know," was the reply.

"There never was any public discussion of the matter at the meetings?"

Many Verbal Instructions.

Wm. Burns, chairman of the court house committee in 1891-92, was next called.

He stated that Mr. Lennox was instructed to take over the Elliott and Neelon work. He admitted that Mr. Lennox received many instructions, which were never put on record, substantiating the architect's claim that the minutes were improperly kept.

Mr. Drayton asked if he remembered the case will be continued to-day.

A description of a mysterious plant that grows in Arabia leads to the belief that it is near kin to American rye. "Tilt-Bits" declares that it "produces flowers of a bright yellow, with seeds that resemble small black beans. The natives dry and pulverize them, and the powder, taken in small doses, makes the soberest person behave like a circus clown or a madman, for he will dance, sing and laugh most boisterously, cut the most fantastic capers and be in an uproarious condition for about an hour. When the excitement ceases the exhausted exhibitor of these antics falls asleep, and when he awakes he has not the slightest remembrance of his daisy doing."
